IRISH ROPES LIMITED

In view of the serious nature of the fire which on Friday destroyed one of our hemp stores, we feel that a frank statement is due to our customers and to those who use cordage for so many essential needs.

The loss is confined to a large reserve of Sisal fibre kept in a separate store, accumulated in consequence of present world conditions, and is to be deplored especially on that account.

We still have an ample stock of Sisal to permit maximum production to be continued, and all possible endeavours are being made to safeguard the more distant position.

No part of our factory other than the store mentioned is damaged or affected; no other stocks have been touched; full employment will continue, and our usual delivery services will be maintained.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE NOTES

MUSICAL SOCIETY'S SEASON

SATURDAY'S CONFERRING AND "RAG"

By Our Correspondent.

TO-DAY lectures are resumed in College after a short break, which divides the rather unsettled first weeks of the term from the more solid period which precedes Christmas. Saturday, being Conferring Day, there was no activity of any kind in College barring the ceremony in the morning. Outside activity in plenty was present in the shape of the Rag, and preliminary reports indicate that the collection was extremely good. On Friday last, on account of the holy day, there were no lectures either, and the rest provided by the long week-end was not unwelcome. Earlier last week several Societies had held highly successful meetings, beginning on Monday with the Commerce Society, which debated the motion: "That the present emergency demands more extensive planning," with Mr. Tomas O Ruairc in the chair. This Society, which has in recent years established itself securely in the first rank, has as its Auditor this year Mr. Patrick Nolan, who has been prominent at its meetings in past seasons. Mr. Brendan O'Brien is Treasurer, Mr. John F. McDermott Record Secretary, and Miss Vivien Turley Correspondence Secretary.

Mr. J. J. Kenny.

An Cumann Litearddha Gaedhilge also held an excellent meeting, with Mr. Fiann O'Brien as chairman; while on Thursday the Law Society had a first-rate debate on the motion: "That the State of to-morrow is totalitarian," at which Professor Daniel Binchy presided.

BROOKE SCHOLARSHIP

The result of the Brooke Scholarship at the King's Inns was announced last week, and first place went to Mr. John J. Kenny, B.A. Mr. Kenny had a distinguished career in College, achieving an unusually brilliant double B.A., a feat of somewhat rare occurrence. Last year he took first place in the Junior Victoria at the Inns, and this year second place in the Senior Victoria. Mr. T. J. Neylon, M.A., H.Dip. in Ed., was second in the Brooke, and earlier in the year was third in the Senior Victoria. He is a past captain of University Hall. Mr. J. W. O'Connor, B.A., third in the Brooke, was first in the Senior Victoria, and was a prominent member, and one-time Record Secretary, of the Law Society in College.

A large number of the names in the list of Solicitors' Final results are well known in College. First place a special certificate and the Overend Scholarship went to Mr. James F. Kearney, who attended lectures in the Law School, and Mr. Daniel Lynch, B.A., who got third place in the legal and political group in his degree last year, came second. He was followed by Mr. John B. Lynch, who got third. There were about sixteen others in the list of successes, but it is impossible to mention all their names and unfair to mention only some of them.

Mr. J. F. Kearney.

The Musical Society has now made plans for the coming season, and music lovers can look forward to a concert before Christmas. Since its reorganisation this society has established for itself a tremendous reputation, and its concert last year astounded even the critics. The credit for the society's success goes to Dr. J. F. Larchet, Professor of Music in College, whose genius for training the chorus and orchestra is equalled only by his enthusiasm. Dr. Larchet, who has been honoured in the past by Trinity College, which conferred on him the honorary degree of Mus.D., is well known on account of his great work for Irish music, and in College he is particularly appreciated. This year both his orchestra and chorus are greater in numbers than before, though recruiting for wind instruments in the one, and tenors in the other, is still in progress. A shortage of good tenors is, however a common complaint in this country, and the same difficulty has always been present in College choirs. The Society's Hon. Secretary, Miss Mairéad McCullough, has a busy time ahead, as the organisation is left entirely in her hands, but in the past she has achieved great things in the face of enormous difficulties, which have now for the most part been surmounted. The most important work in the coming concert is Brahms's magnificent "Song of Destiny," for chorus and orchestra. This is rarely performed in Dublin, and the Society shows admirable courage in putting it in its programme. Rehearsals have also commenced on Haydn's "Clock" Symphony, and it is likely that this will be included in the programme, as also will be Dr. Larchet's delightful arrangement of "An t-Ubhall." Another concert is to be given after Christmas, and it is rumoured that it may include Debussy's "Blessed Damozel." The Society seems to be pervaded by a spirit of progress quite alien to musical circles in our capital city. Dr. Larchet and his musicians will have a room and also an organ in "86," and there is every reason to hope that even the triumphs of the past will be quite forgotten in the glorious performances of the future.

LITERARY PRODUCTIONS

Two literary productions, each admirable in its own sphere, appeared during last week, and both were very well received. The first in point of time was "An Iodh Moraing," the publication of the Gaelic Society which was announced in these notes some weeks back. It is an excellent production of some seventy pages, well bound, with a symbolic sketch in black and white on the outside. The editor is Roisin ni Docartaigh, and Sean O Cléirigh and Eoin O Cionnaoith helped in the production. Among the articles are several of particular interest, including one by Professor Cormac O Cadhlaigh on Irish in the University and one by Seamus O Mórdha on the Ulster question. The Ceann Combairle of the Dail, Proinnsias O Fathaigh, has contributed an article entitled "To-day and Yesterday," and Colm O Lochlainn writes an Irish version of Dr. Thomas Bodkin's introduction to "Twelve Irish Painters," recently published. This well-constructed Digest has had the good reception it deserves, and it is an encouraging sign to see "Vol. 1, No. 1" written on the front page. We may expect a regular appearance of the little magazine now that the first number is such a success. The other literary production of the week is the National Rooster, incorporating, as it says itself, the Stoneybatter Star and some half-dozen other reputable papers. It contains contributions from Mr. Liam Boyd, Miss Maire Brennan, M.Sc.; Messrs. Gerry Byrne, Nial Gogan, D. P. Hanley, B.Arch; Charles Meenan, Roger McHugh, M.A.; J. O'Connor, Kevin O'Nolan, M.A.; Patrick Purcell, M.A.; and Mr. J. Sheridan, M.A.—a formidable list. Apart from the customary witty articles, there are a number of excellent illustrations done by Aodhagan Brisciu, Patrick Delaney, D. P. Hanley, P. J. McDonagh, and J. O'Connor. By this time most of the subscribers to Saturday's charity collection have had an opportunity of seeing the Rooster.

Mr. Barry Devane.

The Rugby team has improved considerably in the last few weeks and the forwards especially are very good. The victories over Limerick Bohemians and Trinity were not very conclusive, but experience has polished up the back play, and, though Nolan, Kinnealy and Bell are on the injured list, the team is well prepared for its "colours" match against Queen's University. On the recent Inter-'Varsities' XV. v. the Rest of Leinster K. O'Flanagan, P. O'Donnell, C. Murray, D. Ryan, E. O'Malley, B. Devane, D. Kelly, D. Hingerty and D. Devane all played, while O'Flanagan and Ryan have been picked to play for Leinster against Ulster. Barry Devane, who is captain of the College team, has found it necessary to issue a warning to players who "cry off" at the last minute without very good cause, and the committee has come to the conclusion that it is better to pick a good player who is sure to turn out than a better man who may let the team down at the last minute.

THE NATIONAL UNIVERSITY

CONFERRING OF DEGREES

A meeting of the National University of Ireland for the purpose of conferring degrees and other academic distinctions was held on Saturday, November 2nd, 1940, in the Council Chamber, Earlsfort terrace.

Professor Corcoran, Dr. O'Searcaigh, Dr. Bannan, Dr. McBride, Dr. Allen, Dr. Roche, Dr. Edwards, Mr. F. W. Warwick, B.A., B.E.; Mr. J. J. O'Neill, M.A., Librarian; Mr. P. F. COMPLIMENT TO MR. C. H. SHANNON

The retirement on pension of Mr. C. H. Shannon, Senior Inspector of Factories, was the occasion of a very pleasant function last Friday night in the Moira Hotel, when his colleagues gathered to wish him well on his departure from the service.

Miss B. Stafford, Chief Inspector of Factories, presided at the dinner and made the presentation, which took the form of a case of pipes and a wallet of notes.

In making the presentation, Miss Stafford recalled the inception of the Factory Inspection Branch on its taking over from the British authorities, when Mr. Shannon was the sole member of the British branch who elected to remain at work for the new Government in Ireland. She paid a tribute to the way in which Mr. Shannon preserved his youthful enthusiasm and zeal, despite difficulties and obstacles, during a long connection with factory inspection.

RESTORATION OF IRISH

THE GAELIC LEAGUE PRESIDENT'S APPEAL

Senator Liam O Buachalla, the new President of the Gaelic League, makes an appeal for unity among all who have the interest of the language at heart.

The time has come, he says, to forget past differences. Much has been achieved, but a great deal still remains to be done. Granted unity among Irish Irelanders, granted the co-operation of all organisations working for the preservation of our native language and culture, the completion of the task can be accomplished within a reasonable time.

Unity and co-operation, he says, can best be secured within the organisation of the Gaelic League, which for nigh on fifty years has struggled to preserve and spread the language, and the immediate task must be to arouse the people to a realisation of the urgency of the language question. There must be brought home to them the danger that threatens the very existence of the nation through failure to restore the language to its rightful place.

We must, he says, work to create that congenial atmosphere in public and private life which is so essential if the excellent work of so many of our schools and colleges is to be fruitful, and, irrespective of party or political affiliations, the Gaelic League extends the hand of friendship to every man and woman who believes in the cause of Irish nationhood in its fullest sense.

SENATOR REPLIES TO CRITICS OF GOVERNMENT

From Our Correspondent.

TIPPERARY, Sunday.

Senator William Quirke, at a meeting of Fianna Fail Comhairle Ceantair in Tipperary to-day, said that owing to the present so-called political truce it was hard to expect enthusiasm in any political party. Within the past week some parochial politicians had taken advantage of this truce to attack Fianna Fail. In Tipperary town a section of the Labour Party had criticised the Government with regard to old age pensions and employment, knowing, as they must know, that since Fianna Fail came into power more people had benefited under the Old Age Pensions Acts than was ever anticipated, and more employment provided than would have been possible under the policy of any other political party. The statements made at this Labour meeting were no more an indication of the feelings of workers in Tipperary than were the statements of a few farmers at a recent Cork meeting were indication of opinion amongst the hard-working farmers of County Cork.

THE WEEK'S FILMS

GOOD QUEEN BESS—NOT SO GOOD LORD ESSEX!

BY OUR CINEMA CORRESPONDENT

Bette Davis.

Adelphi

SUPPOSE that you were directing films for Warner Brothers and you had to make a picture about Queen Elizabeth, who would you choose to play the Queen? Surely there is but one answer—Bette Davis. When you have seen The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex you will know that had you been a producer in any film company the answer must have been the same. Right from the moment the camera first picks out her face, with its well-nigh perfect make-up, you know that possibly no other American screen actress could have played the part with such consummate skill. It is not the fault of Miss Davis if the film is not great or memorable. In every word and gesture—whether she is storming, ranting, cajoling, or smashing the mirrors that reflect a wrinkled, ageing, bitter face—she, at least, convinces. So much cannot be said for Errol Flynn: as Lord Essex he is still a passable Robin Hood.

The story is concerned, almost exclusively, with the love of Elizabeth and Essex—love which is tempered on Elizabeth's side with vanity and pride, and on Essex's with lust for power. Essex comes back from Cadiz with victory, but is upbraided by his Queen for not also bringing back Spanish gold. Furious and hurt, he retires from the Court, but sly old Francis Bacon reunites the two. From then until Essex's departure for Ireland, his defeat there, and return at the head of a revolt, we are given a succession of love scenes, intense, often tender, but always ending in a bitter clash of personalities. Bette Davis makes the end dramatic. On the eve of Essex's execution the haughty Queen sends for him, drops her pride, and offers self, throne, country and empire if he will but love her. But, stubborn, he goes to the block—which, if Essex was anything like Errol Flynn, was just as well for England.

Production, costume and photography (in technicolour) are excellent, and if the drama is uneven it is solely because Bette Davis towers above the rest of the cast.

Theatre Royal

In Queen of the Mob we have a new approach to the-G-man-always-gets-his-man theme; new because in this case the G-man gets not one man, but four—and a woman.

"Ma" Webster is the toughest mobster in the whole of the United States (and that, film fans, is surely saying something). A tall, commanding, grey-haired grandmother, she is fond of children and Father Christmas, but give her a gun and she is even more ruthless than either Charlie, Eddie and Tom, her three gangster sons, or George Frost, the fourth member of her brood. "Ma" and her boys sweep through most of the States of the Union, robbing banks, sticking-up stores, kidnapping millionaires and bumping-off policemen and rival gang leaders, until they have amassed nearly $400,000. Then Nemesis, in the shape of the Federal Bureau of Criminal Investigation, steps in, and, slowly but surely, "Ma" sees her tough little chicks taken from her. One is fatally wounded in a Christmas Eve store stick-up; another, arrested by G-men, is riddled with bullets when the gang attempt a rescue; and Frost, the outsider, is put on the spot. "Ma" has nothing left but one son and 300,000 "hot" dollars, but she faces the future with hope, and plans to become once more the terror of the States. She would have, too, but for those G-men.

If you like car smashes, hold-ups, streams of tommy-gun bullets blasting in windows and doors, and the other trimmings of the super-gangster film, then do not miss the Royal. Personally, I loved it.

Blanche Yurka, who is "Ma" Webster, left the stage for the screen. The stage will miss her.

Capitol

The habits of one of the most cruel animals in the world—the schoolboy—are presented for our inspection in Tom Brown's Schooldays. Generally speaking, the film follows the course of the book, which is, as everybody should know, a history of the trials, triumphs and disasters which befall young Tom Brown, who is jerked from a home where half a dozen servants are at his beck and call into a famous public school at Rugby, where he considers it an honour to clean the boots of a sixth former.

The best performance undoubtedly is given by Sir Cedric Hardwicke, as Dr. Arnold, the headmaster, who is faced with the task of ridding his school of liars and bullies. Jimmy Lydon, as Tom Brown, with an ingratiating grin and attractive matter-of-fact manners, and Freddie Bartholomew, as East, are also good, even if they are sometimes forced to mouth sentences that no schoolboy, no matter in what period he lived, could utter without squirming. Billy Hallop struggled manfully with the part of Flashman, the "bad boy," but gave the impression that he would be much happier wielding tomatoes in the company of the Dead-End Kids.

This is fair entertainment, which will be enhanced if you have read the book.

Carlton

An ingenius piece of pictorial torture is unfolded in Women Without Names, another of the prison series.

As Robert Paige carries Ellen Drew across the threshold on their wedding day a detective, shot by Ellen's first (gangster) husband, falls dead in the kitchen. The happy couple are arrested for the crime, Paige being sentenced to death and Ellen to life-imprisonment. Both go to the same prison, when Ellen has a pleasant grand stand view of her husband walking up the stairs to the room whence nobody returns alive. Before execution day the couple are allowed a close-up—but it is only a stunt election embrace to help the assistant-attorney to become the attorney!

Danielle Darrieux.

And when, eventually, a witness to the shooting tells the true story, and you think it's all over, that darned attorney, still thinking of the polls, doesn't believe it. However, with the aid of a jail-break, it all comes right in the end.

Perhaps, you delight in anguished close-ups in the condemned cell (with violin obbligato), sadism, and the spectacle of a horde of jailed women scrapping; but it's not my idea of entertainment. My only consolation was the thought of what Hollywood really could have done with such a theme.

The supporting film, "Knights of the Range," is in the best tradition of Westerns. Full length, and by Zane Grey, it should have been the feature.

Metropole

Not even its own producer could tell whether Private Affairs is meant to be a farce, a comedy or a light drama. With poker-face Roland Young in the cast it should have been a comedy, and with both Young and Hugh Herbert in the cast it should have been a farce. It was both until Nancy Kelly, Montague Love and a crooked Wall street stockbroker were dragged in.

So if you are content with a comedy-cum-drama, not quite up to the usual Roland Young or Hugh Herbert standards, this is your meat. The story, which doesn't really matter very much, is about bulls, bears, social snobbery, and a black sheep restored to the fold, with the slightest of love interest between Robert Cummings and Nancy Kelly.

In the second film, "Sandy is a Lady," Eugene Pallette, Tom Brown, Mischa Auer, Billy Gilbert and Edgar Kennedy—was there ever such a collection of stars, dim and bright, in one programme?—dote over Baby Sandy. Whether he's toddling through fast traffic, balancing on the top of a sky-scraper, or steering his parents' fortune safely through a crisis (minor), Sandy steals the picture—possibly because nobody else wants it.

Corinthian

J. Farrell MacDonald was a gay spark of a fireman once, running up ladders and rescuing maidens with the rest of them. Now he is retired on pension, but, like many another man who has led a full, active life, he finds it hard to take life easy, so he wanders around to the fire station and plays cards with the boys. But, strictly between ourselves, the boys think he is a bit of an old cod, and when the alarm goes they are glad enough to get away from him. However, his daughter's fiancé still thinks he knows all about fires, and when MacDonald's best friend is burned in a fire caused by a wanted fire-bug he joins in the search and, need we say, gets his man.

This, briefly, is the story of The Last Alarm, which might be termed a "fire thriller." Thriller it is, with plenty of scope for good camera-work among the fierce flames and crashing walls.

The second picture, "On the Spot," does not show up newspaper men in any too favourable a light, but, then, they are American "newshawks," so they deserve all they get. There is plenty of shooting in this story about an attempt to unearth 300,000 dollars worth of loot hidden by a racketeer—and some cheerful comedy, too.

* * *

Andy Hardy Meets Debutante (Savoy). Mickey Rooney suffers deplorably from adolescent love, Lewis Stone offers sage advice, and Judy Garland sings sweetly. What more could you want! Retained.

* * *

Forty Little Mothers (Regal Rooms) would have us believe that Eddie Cantor is a great dramatic actor, but he is still one of the screen's greatest comedians.

* * *

Green Hell (Grafton) is made pleasant and adventurous by the presence of Joan Bennett, Douglas Fairbanks, junior; John Howard, Alan Hale and Vincent Price.

* * *

La Crise Est Finie (Astor) is a charming, gloriously irresponsible French comedy (with English captions, of course). Danielle Darrieux shows the early promise of stardom. See it.

* * *

Wagons Westward (Theatre De Luxe), a Western, with Chester Morris, Buck Jones and Anita Louise, and "Granpa Goes To Town," with the Higgins Family, make up an entertaining double-feature programme. From Thursday—"Alias the Deacon" (comedy, with Bob Burns and Mischa Auer), and "Love, Honour and Oh, Baby" (Donald Woods and Mona Barrie).

* * *

North-west Passage (Pavilion, Dun Laoghaire) is the screen version of the first part of the famous novel, featuring Spencer Tracy, and filmed in technicolour. "David Copperfield," with W. C. Fields, Lionel Barrymore and Freddie Bartholomew, will be shown from Thursday. Both films should be seen.

* * *

F.P.I. (Green) is undoubtedly Conrad Veidt's best film, and should be the most popular of recent re-issues. That grand character-actor, the late Donald Calthrop, is also in the cast, with Jill Esmond, Leslie Fenton and Francis L. Sullivan.

* * *

Arouse and Beware (Regent, Blackrock), with Wallace Beery and Dolores Del Rio, and "The Spirit of the People" (Raymond Massey) are two films worth seeing.

* * *

My Son, My Son! (Astoria, Glasthule) ran for two successful weeks at the Adelphi, Dublin. Featuring Madeleine Carroll and Brian Aherne it is unusually good.

* * *

Laughing Irish Eyes (Grand Central) has singing Phil Regan as a young Blacksmith, pouring out his heart to Evalyn Knapp, and all "in the idyllic setting of the Irish countryside." The second picture is an excellent Bruce Cabot, "Legion of Terror."

MEDICINE AND THE LAW

CAUSE OF FRICTION WHEN THEY TOUCH

BIOLOGICAL SOCIETY DISCUSSION

THE subject of "Medicine and the Law" was discussed by speakers to a paper so entitled which was read by Dr. J. A. Wallace, President-elect, at the opening meeting of the Dublin University Biological Association in Trinity College, Dublin, last Saturday night.

Professor J. Kay Jamieson, outgoing President, presided at the beginning of the proceedings.

Dr. Wallace said that where medicine and law touched there often was an undue amount of friction from the totally different moods of thought of the two subjects. The law demanded certainty, while medicine, as long as it was not an exact science, rarely could produce certainty. The practitioners of law and of medicine often were at cross-purposes and anathematised each other.

Every new discovery in medicine and its related sciences had been pressed into use by medico-legal experts. The medico-legal expert must be capable of dealing with a wide range of subjects in minute detail. In many ways he must approximate to the standard of Sherlock Holmes. All potential medico-legal criminal work should, whenever possible, be placed in the hands of experts.

The settling of purely medical problems in courts of law had become more and more frequent by reason of the increase of road accidents and the recognition of workmen's rights to compensation for injuries received at their work. In many of those cases the points at issue were purely medical, but were tried under conditions settled by lawyers, without thought of special medical difficulties.

COMPENSATION CASES

If there was any need for change in the method of presentation of medical evidence it was in the workmen's compensation cases. Any reform of the method of dealing with workmen's compensation should be more thorough than merely an arrangement to simplify procedure and prevent undue delays. The whole question, both of treatment and of compensation, should be considered as a whole. As soon as possible after a man was injured his case should be considered by a special board, mainly medical in composition, which would have very wide powers to supervise treatment, progress, and subsequent rehabilitation, and which would decide on suitable compensation from time to time. The object of the board should be to produce as soon as possible a fit man, back at his work, or, failing that, one capable of doing more useful work.

The true position of preventive medicine was seen when they considered the work of its experts in the public health services. There they had the relationship between law and medicine, as medicine used the law to compel the observance of its rules for the good of the community.

MEDICAL EVIDENCE

Proposing a vote of thanks to Dr. Wallace, Dr. John McGrath State Pathologist, said that probably of all expert evidence offered in courts ninety per cent. was medical evidence. His experience showed that doctors, especially young doctors, at first suffered from two fundamental disadvantages in court: the first was, he

The Christmas Turkey

It is difficult to realise that Christmas is less than two months away, and it is almost with a sense of shock that one reads the announcements in Saturday's newspapers of the prices which have been agreed upon in London for the Christmas turkey trade. This coming Christmas in Europe will not be accompanied by much of the usual festivity, and with turkeys likely to cost the London householder 2s. 10d. a pound, the Christmas dinner in many houses will be a considerably lighter and less cheerful affair than for many a long year past. Prices are rising in all directions. Many of the customary luxuries will not be obtainable at all. There will be no cakes, for instance, with the traditional mound of snowy icing on top, and rationing will limit the cooks still further in their usually lavish preparations for that most exciting meal in the year. The newly announced prices for turkeys as yet have no official authority, but if the producers are to receive 2s. 6d. a pound, it seems highly improbable that the wholesale purchaser will be able to do better than the predicted 2s. 10d. a pound. At that rate the ordinary fifteen pound turkey will cost no less than £2 2s. 6d., and there must be very few people in England—or anywhere, for that matter—who are prepared to pay what to many of them is a week's wages for "a bit of a bird." The people of Great Britain at the present time are being urged to save every possible penny and to lend their savings to the Government for the prosecution of the war. Yet, war or no war, they will wish to indulge in some few modest luxuries to grace the Christmas table. One of those luxuries, undoubtedly, would be a turkey; but will they pay £2 for a turkey? The price of feeding stuffs may have soared out of all reason during the last year, but surely the cost of producing turkeys has not advanced so steeply in the last few months that the poultry breeders must be paid as much as a shilling a pound more than last year to compensate them for their expenses? Possibly the Government will intervene with a controlled price, and it may be doing the turkey breeders a good turn in disguise if it does intervene; for otherwise it seems highly likely that the breeder, instead of making a handsome profit this Christmas, will be given the bird to take home again and keep there until he is prepared to accept something that looks like a respectable price for it. The prices fixed for English turkeys will have a direct bearing upon the price which Irish producers will receive, since English and Irish turkey prices usually move together, and this year, owing to the absence of continental supplies, there may be still less variation between the prices for English and Irish birds. We would repeat, however, that if producers expect the long-suffering public to pay £2 and upwards for the Christmas fowl, they are making a very dangerous gamble.

Irish Sport

Conditions at Leopardstown on Saturday were not exactly pleasant, and it hardly would have been a matter for surprise if only a hundred or so of people had attended the race meeting. Yet the car parks were well filled; the trains and omnibuses brought their quotas, and the stands were comfortably crowded. Leopardstown, of course, has had many bigger attendances; but, in the circumstances, the number of spectators was encouraging. The fact of the matter is that racing in Ireland is enjoying a spell of exceptional popularity. There are several English-owned horses in the country. Irish racing is being supported by many English patrons, and even the jockeys include a sprinkling of cross-Channel men. Excellent fields are the rule at virtually every meeting, and the public, appreciative of the fact that splendid fare is being offered for their entertainment, are generous with their support. In response to the demand for more racing, the Stewards of the Irish Turf Club twice have extended the flat-racing season, at first to December 7th, and, last week, for a further week—having arranged an additional meeting at the Curragh as a suitable wind-up to a season of extraordinary sport. The Irishman's love of the horse always has been notable, and the Irishwoman is just as enthusiastic about any form of sport in which the horse is engaged. During the past few weeks the cards of the various hunting organisations have been issued, and it is obvious that riding to hounds will suffer in no way as a result of the war. On nearly every day in the coming months there will be hunting at anything from eight to over a dozen places in Ireland. This country's good fortune during the present crisis in Europe has been mentioned in connection with many other aspects of life, but in sport particularly we are in an enviable position. Next year the racing in Ireland may be even better. Many of the best-bred yearlings of these islands are in Ireland at present, and in the future there will be a wealth of two-year-olds taking part in our meetings. Racing has a thrill and a pageantry of its own, and the tired business man finds in it a great relaxation from the cares of his factory, shop and office.

THE DEADLOCK AT DUN LAOGHAIRE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The failure of the Borough Councillors of Dun Laoghaire, after three meetings held for the purpose, to elect their Chairman for the year now current, brings what otherwise might be regarded as a "private row" unpleasantly to the notice of the residents who elected them, and is a justification for taking a hand in the game before the matter becomes subject to public ridicule. It is a fair assumption that, so long as this uncertain position exists, the public duties which these gentlemen were elected to discharge cannot be given their full attention. That is particularly to be regretted in a period of threatened emergency, when the business of local authorities should be carried out in as well-ordered and efficient a manner as it is possible to achieve.

In these circumstances, I venture to make a suggestion designed to overcome the present impasse. I believe that any one of the members of the Borough Corporation is capable of guiding the proceedings of that body in meeting, and otherwise of upholding the dignity of the office of Chairman. My suggestion is, therefore, that immediately prior to the next meeting the names of all Councillors willing to act as Chairman be placed in a hat and a name drawn, the understanding being that the Councillor whose name emerges will be proposed, seconded and supported for the chairmanship at the subsequent meeting. If personal feelings or other irrelevant considerations are not to be brought into play, this plan should give us as good a result as any.

Another matter: In these times, when public expenditure is a severe and growing tax on the resources of every citizen, I am satisfied it would earn the appreciation of the ratepayers if one of the councillors were to table a motion, to be adopted on the same occasion, rescinding the resolution, passed six or seven years ago by the present Borough Corporation, which appointed a salary of £400 per annum to the office of chairman. During the lifetime of the first Corporation the duties and functions of chairman were satisfactorily performed by the two holders of that office without salary. As a matter of fact, the four local Councils which were amalgamated to form the Borough Corporation never paid a salary to their respective chairmen. It would be true to say also that the old councillors worked harder and gave more time to public business than their successors of to-day, who, under the managerial system (which relieves them of all detailed administration) have only, in the main, to dot the "i"s and cross the "t"s of the Borough Manager. (This, by the way, without any desire to minimise the value of their services.)

As a ratepayer, and, therefore, an interested party, I am not satisfied from the information available to the public that the personal services required from the Chairman of the Corporation are of such an onerous character, or the expenditure involved so great, as to justify the award of a salary so high as nearly £8 per week. I am, however, open to conviction on this point, and trust that the councillors who voted the salary, and on whom the onus lies to justify their action, will publicly state their reasons for doing so. I have no desire to be left with the impression that the not-infrequent speeches about the "interests of the overburdened ratepayers" were so much lip-service to a principle not honoured in the observance.

It may be argued that the voting of a salary, which is within the powers conferred on the Corporation, is an indirect method through which a fund, not authorised by the Statute, can be established to enable the Chairman to maintain the dignity of the Borough—e.g., by receiving in a suitable manner important personages passing through the "Gateway of Ireland." My answer is that the experience of recent years demonstrates that such a fund is not required, and, in any case, should the need arise, that public-spirited residents might be relied on voluntarily to rise to the occasion as they did in the past.

Finally—and this is the reason which appeals to one who desires to see a sound civic spirit permeating our public bodies—the office of chairman should be one of honour conferred, and not of pecuniary gain. As I see it, the chairmanship of the Borough Corporation does not necessarily call for personal expenditure; it is available to any member of the Corporation, irrespective of the question of his financial resources; and it should be conferred on the councillor, whoever he may be, who has rendered, or is in a position to render, special services to the community—in short, one whom the councillors, as representing the residents, desire to honour above his fellows.—Yours, etc.,

"TOLERANCE IN THE NORTH"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I am glad to know, from Mr. Healy's second letter, that he is as anxious as I am to see that better housing and living conditions are provided for the people. If he, and other public men who are expert propagandists, will now devote more of their time and energies towards the attainment of this object, perhaps something will be done. We shall, at any rate, have something of that "nagging propaganda" for which I pleaded at the Synod. This will be directed against "real" grievances, such as the miserable pittances provided by the State for old age pensioners and the unemployed.

I gave illustrations of these real grievances at the Synod. An old woman I know has 10s. per week pension. She has to pay 6s. per week rent. She has, therefore, 4s. per week for food, clothes and fire. Since the meeting of the Synod I have obtained further facts which make such cases even more distressing. Mr. C. D. Watters, Irish Secretary of the N.U.R., pleading the cause of the railwaymen in Dublin this week, mentioned that the cost of living index figure is now 33 points higher than in August, 1939. This increase is equivalent to 3s. 8½d. in the £, which means that this old age pensioner's spending power is reduced almost by 1s. The spending power is further reduced because of the fact that the poor must, necessarily, buy in very small quantities. This old lady, for example, buying her coal by the stone pays more per ton than I do.

I also gave facts and figures in connection with families struggling to exist on the unemployment benefit. A family of nine people, after rent and light are paid for, has 18s. 6d. per week for food and clothes. The highest amount a man and his wife can receive from the unemployment assistance, which comes into operation when the benefit is exhausted, is 23s. per week. It means, as I said at the Synod, slow starvation. These people are not greatly interested in Mr. Healy's "greatest grievance." Neither, I suggest, are their opposite numbers in the North, especially if they are aware of these facts.

The responsible Minister of State has this week refused the request of a T.D. for an increase on the old age pensions allowances. This indicates the necessity for "nagging propaganda."

I am glad to find that Mr. Healy now admits that Roman Catholic non-transferred schools are treated exactly the same as Protestant non-transferred schools so far as grants from public funds are concerned. Mr. Healy did not mention this in his first letter, nor is the fact mentioned, so far as I am aware, when the subject is dealt with by other propagandists, clerical and lay. The numbers of schools affected is beside the point. The principle is what matters. It may be the fact that because all Roman Catholic schools are non-tranferred there is a "real" grievance. I do not know. Neither, I suggest, does Mr. Healy or any other Roman Catholic layman, because of the fact that no statement of accounts is published by the authorities of his Church. I am open to correction on this point, but I have never seen or heard of any such statement.

Mr. Healy is mistaken when he says that I used the words "other things" in my speech at the Synod. But, as he mentioned in his previous letter, and now repeats, that "no Nationalist would to-day be elected to any position under any of the Northern County Councils, Borough Councils or District Councils, if any other applicant were available," I would refer him to an article in one of his local newspapers this week, where this statement is branded as being absolutely untrue. Facts are given to support this assertion. In addition, I am informed that the statement is untrue in regard to appointments made by the Fermanagh County Council, the Urban Council and the Enniskillen Board of Guardians. As Mr. Healy lives in Enniskillen further comment is unnecessary.

A case which has to be bolstered up as this one is must be a weak one. In point of fact, there is no intolerance in the North such as Mr. Healy suggests. In my own experience I have found that the friendliest possible relations existed between the people. Roman Catholics and Protestants were always ready to co-operate in any good cause. I have the happiest recollections of this co-operation in connection with a District Nursing Committee. I found, on visiting the homes of our people, that their Roman Catholic neighbours were always ready and willing to help in times of sickness and trouble, and vice versa. My own opinion is that there would be no trouble at any time if the people were left alone by demagogues.

Mr. Healy refers to the happy state of our people in the twenty-six counties. I find it hard to understand why any special commendation should be thought necessary for a Government in a civilised country which treats decent, law-abiding people in a proper way.

He also wants to know what I think about what he describes as the "greatest grievance." I am not a politician. My relations in regard to the State are governed by the command: "Render, therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's." Who Cæsar may be in the particular place in which I am living does not trouble me a great deal.—Yours, etc.,

R. J. KERR.

Dublin, November 2nd, 1940.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—It would be insulting the intelligence of the readers of the Irish Times if I acceded to the request of Mr. Cahir Healy to apologise to them for my letter of the 28th inst.

That statement still stands undiluted. It has been substantiated by the Rev. Kerr, M.A., in his letter of the 29th inst. No further comment from me is, therefore, necessary. Mr. Cahir Healy knows perfectly well that he has not stated the whole facts, but still reiterates half-truths.

I am not a politician. I have no connection with any political party or association. I am simply a citizen of Northern Ireland, and an Irishman to boot. As such, I consider that 99½ per cent. of Mr. Cahir Healy's letter is unadulterated political piffle, and the ordinary person in Northern Ireland is sick and tired of hearing it.

If I were a militant politician as Mr. Healy I would certainly keep my name before the public, but as I am not where is the crime in anonymity. Some of the world's best pieces of literature has appeared under a pen name.

Mr. Healy need not worry about my name; it would not interest him.

Finally, if it is so necessary for the Roman Catholic Church and some of the Protestant Churches to retain their schools for conscience sake—then, under heaven, stop prating about it, and stop striving to make a virtue of a necessity. Does he really imagine that he can have his bread buttered on both sides?—Yours, etc.,

INSURANCE AND THE L.S.F.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—With reference to several letters which have appeared in the papers lately referring to this subject, I have been inquiring from some of the insurance companies as regards this point.

From what I can ascertain, the position at present is this:—A car owner engaged on A.R.P. work is covered only when going to and coming from such work. In other words, a car owner is covered, say, while using his car to go to the dressing station for practice, and returning home therefrom would be covered, but not if some emergency arose whereby he had to use his car to bring a casualty to hospital.

I am informed that the Accident Offices' Association in London are discussing this point, and possibly some scheme of insurance to cover the use of a car when a state of emergency arises may eventually be brought out.

I trust this information may be of use to car owners.—Yours, etc.,

"TUBERCULOSIS IN CATTLE"

In the letter from Dr. Byrne on this topic which was published on the 2nd inst. a printer's error occurred. Discussing the statistical value of Dr. Mushatt's findings the letter read: "Speaking conservatively, at least five hundred cases of each class of tuberculous manifestation should be taken before one may safely and validly attempt any biomathematical interpretation of the results obtained. In this instance, therefore, where four classes of disease were included, some four hundred tests rather than fifty should have been done to be of any value." In the first sentence "five hundred" should, of course, read "one hundred."

LONDON LETTER

MR. CHURCHILL'S NEXT STATEMENT

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
SUNDAY NIGHT.

MR. CHURCHILL'S next statement to Parliament on the war situation may cover a wide field, incorporating both foreign and domestic matters; but the main interest will be centred upon what he is able to reveal of the developments in the Eastern Mediterranean, where events of vital importance are taking place. It may not be possible to enter into details concerning the exact extent of the assistance which Britain is giving to Greece on sea and land and in the air, but it is hoped that the Prime Minister will be able to give an assurance that the measures already taken are sufficient to meet the situation, and that they are being followed by further aid adequate enough to protect the interests of this country and of Greece, so that the danger of Axis domination of more territory has been countered. Possibly also Mr. Churchill may be able to throw some light on the position which has followed the meetings between Herr Hitler and Marshal Pétain, General Franco and Signor Mussolini.

Domestic Matters

On the domestic side there are many subjects upon which Mr. Churchill will be able to give useful information. They include the liabilities of tenants of houses rendered uninhabitable by bomb damage, the question of immediate improvements in shelters, and the position with regard to the winter coal supply. Despite all the discussions during the summer months, the supply of fuel does not appear to be in a satisfactory state. There is no shortage of coal, but it is not in the right places and the Mining and Transport Ministries are blaming each other for the faulty distribution. The policy of having huge dumps of coal at convenient spots in all thickly populated areas does not appear to have been followed to any great extent, and in some districts stocks are insufficient to meet winter needs, while there are thousands of empty trucks on railway sidings. This is a matter which will assume increasing importance as the colder weather approaches, and it is to be hoped that urgent action will be taken to bring out a more satisfactory position.

The Dive Bomber

Air activity over this country has been less intense during the week-end, and few of the raiders have been able to get through the barrage, which has been heavier than ever. Italian machines are believed to have accompanied the Germans, and, foiled in their attempts to reach central districts, the raiders machine-gunned a shopping street in a suburban neighbourhood. It has become known to-day that the Royal Eagle, a pleasure steamer known to thousands of holiday-makers, brought down a dive bomber in the Thames Estuary on Friday, and it is evident that increased attention is being paid to the question of dealing with these machines, which, by reason of their high speed, have been difficult to cope with. If the dive bomber menace can be successfully countered, a great step forward will have been taken.

Remarkable Escape

The shelter in which only two people were slightly injured out of the eight thousand there on Friday night, when a bomb crashed through the structure above them, is one of the largest of the kind in London, and was the first to be fitted with sleeping bunks. There was no sign of confusion, and the people remained after the two who were slightly injured had been attended to. This is only one of several remarkable escapes during the course of the air attack on London. The bomb struck the masonry above the shelter, which was of a sufficiently solid character to take the force of the explosion, so that the shelter underneath did not suffer a great amount of damage. On the other hand, there have been some cases where unfortunate damage has been caused by a single bomb. A case of this kind during the week-end was where a London 'bus was struck, several of the passengers being killed; but, on the whole, the number of fortunate escapes outnumber the cases of injury through exceptional circumstances.

Housing the Homeless

Better progress is now being made in the work of providing accommodation for people who have lost their homes owing to air action. At first the homeless people were sent to church halls and similar buildings, but more suitable places are now being found, and houses, both large and small, are being taken over by the local authorities. Where the damage is not of an extensive character owners of some houses are employing men at their own expense to have the houses made habitable, but in cases of severe structural damage reconstruction will have to wait, and new homes are being found for the tenants who have been turned out. Excellent work has been done in the way of making temporary repairs, and in some instances houses have been rendered reasonably fit for occupation by the covering of damaged roofs with tarpaulins and the fitting of doors and windows, which, though not intended as permanent repairs, at least serve the purpose of affording a reasonable degree of protection for the inhabitants. Where only empty houses have been available there has been an immediate response to appeals for simple furniture, such as bedding, chairs and tables, and pots and pans and kettles and crockery have been given to enable the homeless people to prepare their own meals.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Mr. J. P. Kennedy

With his Ambassador to the Court of St. James (Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy) back in America, President Roosevelt is once again surrounded by his triumvirate of famous advisers—Mr. Cordell Hull, Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Sumner Welles.

An American colleague, who was a friend of President Roosevelt's family and attended many of the President's Press conferences in his rôle as a reporter, once told me that these three men were the "Presidential props." "There is Hull," he said, "with his knowledge of foreign affairs; Kennedy, with his business acumen; and the tall, icy Bostonian, Sumner Welles, to help them add up."

There have been many rumours regarding Mr. Kennedy's possible resignation from his London post; they may well be true, because it is the custom for United States Ambassadors to tender their resignations after a Presidential election. If President Roosevelt is defeated, there will probably be a change in the United States representation at the Court of St. James; if he continues for a third term, 'the smiling Irish-American, "Joseph P.," may be expected to return to London.

Boswell and Ireland

James Boswell, whose bi-centenary occurred last week, paid a notable visit to Ireland in 1769. The holiday occupied six weeks, and he was accompanied by Miss Peggy Montgomerie, whom he married later in that year and who had numerous relations in Ireland.

Boswell was well received. He was entertained at the home of the Lord Lieutenant, dined with the Duke of Leinster at Carton, and met Lord Charlemont, the Bishop of Derry and Dr. Leland.

He was always partial to Irishmen, and numbered among his friends Burke, Sheridan, Goldsmith and Malone. He was also friendly with Francis Gentleman, an Irishman who had been in the Army and had taken to the stage. Boswell encouraged and assisted him, and the actor later dedicated a work to his patron.

Boswell also met Dr. Percy, then Bishop of Dromore, and in later years he wrote:

"I am resolved some time or other to see Ireland all over, and with what glee shall we talk old stories at Dromore!"

Italians Speeding up Bombing Attacks

THE Greeks have repulsed the Italian offensive against the Western gap in the direction of Janina and taken 1,000 Italian prisoners, according to reports from well-informed quarters on the Yugoslav frontier, quoted by the Press Association from Belgrade. The reports add that many tanks have been captured, and large units of Italians are in a dangerous position.

Rome radio said last night: "Italian troops are finding themselves up against a well-fortified line of resistance."

Reports from Belgrade and Rome yesterday, says the Associated Press, told of fresh Italian air and land drives against Greece, and Italian sources said that Marshal Graziani's forces in North Africa were "about ready" for an offensive against Mersa Matruh, and, eventually, Alexandria and Suez.

The Greeks, however, were not waiting upon Italian initiative and, according to reports reaching Belgrade from Athens, Greek forces have been harassing the Fascists on Albanian territory, and doing their utmost to hinder the advance, pending the development of British aid.

Belgrade reported that Italian warplanes swept over Northern Greece to bomb Salonika for the third successive day, and also concentrated on railway communications running eastwards and northward from Salonika. The Italian columns driving through the rough, rocky frontier region of Northern Greece were apparently aimed at Janina and Florina, with the ultimate object of enveloping the Greek Army.

British land forces and naval air units are reported at Crete, according to Greek sources quoted by the Press Association, while Rome radio stated last night that units of the Royal Navy are near the Island of Leukas, in the Ionian Sea, about 56 miles south-east of Corfu.

Military circles attach great importance to reports that the heavy artillery battle which had raged in the Pisbar gorge—a vital road through the mountains from Florina to Salonika—has ceased, and it is suggested that the Italians have given up their attempts to storm the pass.

Count Ciano, the Italian Foreign Minister, and Mussolini's two sons have taken part in air raids on Salonika, says a Rome despatch to the German News Agency.

MANY CIVILIANS KILLED

Associated Press, from Belgrade yesterday, reporting that Italian 'planes were bombing Salonika and concentrating on railway communications running eastward and northward from Salonika, said that the Greek Air Force continued their attacks on Italian troop concentrations, and were also ranging deep into Albania to bomb Italian supply centres.

NIGHT ATTACKS

Informed sources in Greece reported that the Greeks, passing the lower end of Lake Prespa in small boats at night, successfully engaged Italian garrisons near the Albanian village of Tusteco, to the north of the lake, in the main battle sector. It was stated that with such harrying tactics the Greeks were doing their utmost to hinder an Italian advance pending the development of British aid.

Reports from Idomeni, the first Greek railway station across the Yugoslav border, told of hearing bomb explosions and anti-aircraft fire as Italian 'planes tried to destroy railway bridges on the two parallel railway lines merging to the north from Salonika. The damage done could be repaired, reports said.

No further details were available of the Salonika bombing, with telephone communications to the city interrupted by a reported hit.

Heavy artillery fire was again heard yesterday across the Yugoslav frontier from the region where the Italians were trying to batter their way to Florina.

ITALIANS TAKE VILLAGE

According to some reports the Italian troops yesterday pushed ahead for a short distance across the Graeco-Italian frontier to occupy the village of Kovalica.

Associated Press from Rome yesterday said that the Anglo-Italian race for air and sea bases in Greece developed, as a return of good weather gave Italy's land troops firmer soil on which to push their advance. Italian bombers, once more able to shoot through clear skies, carried load after load of bombs to dump them on Greek ports where the British might be unloading troops to bolster the Greek defences.

Janina and Florina appeared to be the immediate objectives of the widely-separated Italian columns which were driving through the rough rocky mountains of Northern Greece, apparently with the intention of enclosing the Greek Army in a mighty forceps.

ITALIAN ADVANCE

The Italian High Command stated yesterday: "The operations started in Epirus are developing. Our troops in their advance from Borgo Tellini to the Bridge of Perati, on the River Calibaki, have overcome by decisive manœuvres numerous defensive lines, which were all well fortified and strongly aided by obstacles.

"The Air Force has carried out numerous bombing actions, effectively hitting military objectives at Corfu where numbers of explosions were caused, particularly in Porto Novo. The Port of Patras was also bombed, where a fire was caused in the station at Samandrea, and where a factory and military barracks were hit. In addition, Larissa and Janina and Salonika were bombed. During these actions an enemy fighter was probably shot down.

"In addition, Navarino was bombed, and a fire was caused there. Canea also figures in the list of towns bombed by the Italian Air Force, and the port installations received a number of hits.

"Two Italian 'planes have not returned."

GREEKS HOLD POSITIONS

Saturday night's Greek communiqué said that despite heavy attacks by Italian artillery and aircraft Greek troops held on to their positions inside Albanian territory, which they had won at the point of the bayonet.

The Greek communiqué stated :—

"On the Epirus front and in Western Macedonia there were lively artillery duels. The positions occupied by us inside Albanian territory in the Florina sector were held in spite of heavy attacks from enemy artillery and aircraft. Our 'planes bombed with success enemy aerodromes at Korytsa and Argyrokastro, destroying several enemy 'planes on the ground. Oil depôts caught fire and several fires were seen at the aerodromes.

"Enemy concentrations and batteries were also successfully bombed. In aerial battles four enemy bombers were shot down. Two of our 'planes are missing.

"Enemy aviation continued their attacks against the civilian population. The towns of Salonika, Patras and the surrounds of Corfu, Janina and Canea, as well as other towns and villages, were bombed No military objective was attacked. Several buildings were destroyed, and there are dead and wounded among the civilian population."

MANY TOWNS BOMBED

A communiqué issued by the Ministry of Home Security in Athens states :—

"Yesterday Italian aeroplanes carried out several raids in the interior of the country. At Patras and in its neighbourhood there were two raids, which caused very few casualties, although there was some damage to buildings. At Salonika there were two raids, causing a number of casualties among the civilian population and damage to building.. In the neighbourhood of Salonika one enemy machine was shot down.

"There were two raids on Corfu, but there were very few civilian casualties and little damage. Janina and its environs had three raids, which caused very few casualties and a minimum of damage. One enemy 'plane was shot down in flames in the town. Another aircraft fell in the Janina district.

"There were two raids on Crete, but there were very few victims, and the damage to buildings was small. Other raids were carried out on ten other villages and towns with insignificant results. No military objective was hit."

200 DIE IN RAIDS ON SALONIKA

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.

ATHENS, Sunday.

Two hundred civilians—including a number of children—were killed in two raids on Salonika yesterday afternoon; according to a Salonika despatch. Despite a gallant defence by Greek fighters, twenty bombers attacked the refugee civilian quarter. The full death roll is still unknown.

In the first official recognition of heroism King George last night visited the bedside of Captain Couzuyanis, a severely-wounded pilot. Captain Couzuyanis had returned from a low-flying machine gun attack on Italian troops. When the injured pilot recovered consciousness for a short period King George promoted him to the rank of major.

BRITISH IN CRETE

The Greek Press states categorically that British troops and British naval and air units are in Crete.

The broadcast of the First Lord of the Admiralty has delighted the Athens public, who had been patiently waiting for concrete news of action by Britain.

Greek morale, already high, has risen still higher as a result of this important development. The Greek people have tremendous faith in Britain.

TO LOOK AFTER GREEK INTERESTS

VICHY, Sunday.

At the request of the Greek Government the Swiss Government has agreed to take charge of Greek interests in Italy, according to a Berne despatch.—(P.A. War Special.)

BRITISH TROOPS IN GREECE

ASSURANCE BY FIRST LORD

Mr. A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, in a broadcast yesterday announced that Britis troops have been landed in Greek territory the Royal Navy is there, too, and air support is already being given.

"We shall honour our pledge to Greece," he declared, and characterised the pretexts for the invasion of that country by the Italians as "a series of cold-blooded lies."

The Frst Lord, expressing the Navy's thanks to America for the fifty destroyers recently handed over to England, added : "I shall be equally thankful for any more that can be spared."

No one in authority would under-estimate the dangers that confronted Britain. Nevertheless, there were reassuring facts in the situation to-day and the road to victory was beginning to define itself Invasion might come, but it had not come yet, nor had Hitler's advertised arrival in London or the victory march through Berlin, while months of Blitzkrieg had proved that Mr. and Mrs. John Bull had the courage to "take it." It had also proved the superiority of the Royal Air Force.

"I have particularly in mind," said the First Lord, "the dates August 15, September 15 and September 27 when we won in the air what will be rated three outstanding victories in the history of the world."

As to the part played by the Navy, he said : "The German Admirals appear reluctant to cruise in the North Sea. Nor have we been much more fortunate in the Mediterranean, where the Italian Admirals appear to regard their capital ships as long-term investments and to be determined to emerge from the war with them unscathed by battle action."

Emphasising that there could be no turning back in the war, Mr. Alexander said : "No half measures are possible. We must give all, dare all, ensure all, or lose all."

GREEK TROOPS WELL EQUIPPED

ROME SPEAKS OF DIFFICULTIES

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.

ROME, Sunday.

The "enormous difficulties" in the shape of bad weather and wild country, almost devoid of roads, which beset the Italian forces operating in Greece are emphasised by the war correspondent of the Official Stefani Agency.

Declaring that the Greek-Albanian frontier has been crossed at all points, and the Italian forces have everywhere penetrated to a depth of at least a few miles, he adds : "In the Janina sector the enemy is putting up a certain resistance, and it can be seen that the Greek divisions are well equipped and have good artillery and machine guns, and plenty of them. They are supported by aircraft of various types.

"In spite of that," he says, "the forces at the disposal of Greece cannot possibly be compared with those which Fascist Italy is using in Epirus."

ITALIAN AND GERMAN CLAIMS

British Warship Hit, Rome Says

TWO SUBMARINES LOST

TO-DAY'S official Italian communiqué, says a Press Association War Special from Rome last night, claims that Italian torpedo-carrying 'planes have attacked "a large British naval formation" off the Egyptian coast, and that one British warship was hit. Two Italian submarines are admitted to be missing.

MALTA BOMBED

After reporting events on the Greek front, the communiqué continues :—

"In the early hours of the afternoon four Italian bomber formations, escorted by fighters, carried out an offensive action on Malta. The port installations at Valetta received direct hits and were extensively damaged, as were also the installations and stores at the airport of Nicabba. In spite of the violent anti-aircraft reactions the Italian attack was not slowed down.

"During the fierce air combat which followed a British fighter was shot down in flames into the sea. One of our machines has not returned.

"On their journey home one Italian formation was attacked by four enemy fighters, which, following prompt Italian reaction, was thwarted.

SHIP HIT

"A large British naval formation off the Egyptian coast was overtaken by our torpedo-carrying aircraft, and one British ship was hit.

"In East Africa our Air Force has bombed the port installations at Perim and the airport at Roseires (Sudan), hitting two Wellesley aircraft on the ground. During reconnaissance flights to Chascim and Ghirba an Italian 'plane shot down a British fighter and extensively damaged another.

"In the Upper Scius Ceib zone, north-west of Kassala (Sudan), detachments of Sudanese, aided by armoured cars, came into combat with our patrols and were repelled.

"Two Italian submarines have not returned to their bases."

WHAT MALTA SAYS

MALTA, Sunday.

The following official communiqué was issued here last night:—

"Enemy 'planes flew over Malta to-day, and were attacked by our fighters and anti-aircraft fire. Two enemy 'planes were brought down.

"Slight damage was done to Government property. Some bombs were dropped, but there were no service or civilian casualties. Four houses were demolished."

BOMBING OF ENGLAND

GERMAN HIGH COMMAND REPORT

BERLIN, Sunday.

To-day's German High Command communiqué makes the following claims :—

"Despite adverse weather conditions, which considerably hampered flying and attacks, especially by night, in storm, heavy squalls, rain, low-flying clouds and icing conditions, the German Air Force continued their reprisal attacks yesterday and during the night against London, and in particular effectively plastered supply centres with bombs. Hangers and billets were bombed at several aerodromes. Further attacks were directed against harbours and industrial plant.

"An armaments works at Castle Bromwich received serious hits.

"On the East Coast a bomber sank a merchant ship of 6,000 tons. The commander of this machine, Major Harling Hausen, has thereby destroyed his twentieth merchant vessel, and increased the tonnage sunk by him to the total of 100,000 tons.

"The enemy undertook only a few isolated flights. The attempt by some enemy 'planes to fly over to the North French Coast in the early morning was repulsed by anti-aircraft guns on the Channel Coast. Two of the aircraft were shot down. The enemy lost two further 'planes in air battles over London during the day. During this action and night operations, carried out in particularly bad weather conditions, seven German 'planes were lost."

FROM "THE TIMES"

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

HELP FOR GREECE

In an editorial article to-day The Times observes :—Some days ago a suspicion arose that there had been a hitch in Italian plans against Greece. This has now become stronger, though it would be most unwise to suppose that Mussolini might not remould these plans to suit unexpected circumstances. The attack on Greece was begun so late in the season that vigorous and rapid action to take advantage of what was left of the good weather was to be expected. Again, the methods which the Dictators have made familiar would have deprived Greece of the respite necessary to complete her mobilisation, and anticipated the arrival of aid from Great Britain. Yet the lightening attack did not come. Far from the Italians having advanced along the Koritsa-Salonika road, it is the Greeks who have taken the initiative in this quarter, though so far only with small forces. Further south the Italians have engaged more troops, and are now reported to be bringing up artillery in the coast zone, but even here their methods have been deliberate. As a result, Greece has been enabled to make good progress with her mobilisation. Outposts which had given ground before the enemy have been reinforced, and have, in some instances, pushed forward again. Great Britain has been afforded time to put into operation plans already drawn up, and, in fact, British forces have already landed in Greek territory.

GERMAN DRIVE TO TURKEY?

BERLIN FORECASTS BIG MOVE

ASSOCIATED PRESS.

BERNE, Sunday.

OBSERVERS here believe that the talk arranged between Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister; von Ribbentrop and Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, is the forerunner of a German military drive on the Dardanelles.

Balkan reports said that German troops now were employing the Hungarian railways in moving eastward.

Travellers reported that crack German motorised infantry troops had been withdrawn from France and sent to the Balkans.

BERLIN FORECASTS BIG MOVES

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL

MADRID, Sunday.

Big political and diplomatic developments are impending, according to the Berlin correspondent of the newspaper, Ya. It is stated that M. Laval, with two other French Ministers, is at present examining concrete problems with the German authorities, and that if these talks make rapid progress peace between France, Italy and Germany may be signed on the twenty-second anniversary of the 1918 Armistice.

Another Berlin correspondent, the representative of Arriba, says that within a few days the whole of the European Continent, with the exception of Turkey, will be in a single bloc opposed to Britain. He adds that fresh important interviews are being talked about, among them one in Italy to-morrow, at which Count Ciano and Herr von Ribbentrop will "listen to Laval." Herr von Papen's sudden trip to Berlin from Ankara is related to the recent Florence talks, he asserts.

AXIS MINISTERS IN CONFERENCE

BERNE, Sunday.

Diplomatic sources here to-day reported that Count Ciano, the Italian Foreign Secretary, had left Albania to confer with Herr von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Secretary, and Herr von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey. Herr von Papen arrived in Berlin recently from Ankara, and left for the grouse shooting in Moravia, where Herr von Ribbentrop had also gone shooting, and it was thought to be not unlikely that Count Ciano would join the party. It was said that the trio were expected to discuss the Axis plans for the Balkans and Eastern Mediterranean, following Turkey's armed neutrality stand in the Italo-Greek War.—(The Associated Press.)

QUIET WEEK-END IN THE AIR

London's Few Night "Alerts"

AIR activity over England during Saturday night and yesterday was on a smaller scale than usual.

Saturday night was the quietest experienced for many weeks.

The attacks for the greater part were made by single aeroplanes.

British reports state that in yesterday's encounters one raiding aircraft was destroyed and one British fighter was lost.

For the first time since the intense air attacks began there was no alert till a late hour last night in London.

BRITISH COMMUNIQUE

The British Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security issued the following communiqué this morning :—

"Very few casualties have been reported in last night's air raids on this country, which were all on a small scale and had ended some time before midnight.

"Bombs were dropped in London and the Home Counties, and in Eastern and South-Eastern England. Houses and shops were damaged at several places in these areas, but the damage, as a whole, was not great.

"There was some slight enemy activity over Eastern England shortly before dawn this morning, but no reports have so far been received of bombs being dropped.

"One enemy aircraft was destroyed during the night."

RAIDS ON LONDON

PRESS ASSOCIATION TELEGRAM.

LONDON, Sunday.

Lone German raiders to-day machine-gunned streets in two London areas. One of them, described as a big bomber, dropped a number of bombs, and it is believed that there were several casualties when a footbridge was hit. One pedestrian was released from the wreckage by rescue squads.

The 'plane is reported to have circled slowly while it dropped its bombs, two of which hit a building. No alert was sounded. Nobody was hurt by the raider's machine-gun bullets as it dived on one small street.

The other German machine fled when anti-aircraft batteries opened fire after its first machine-gun bursts on various streets. It made another attack later, but no casualties were reported.

The sound of aeroplane engines and machine-guns was heard in three other London districts. In one, a German 'plane passed above the house-tops at a height of a few hundred feet.

People returning from church were in the streets of the two London districts which were machine-gunned by a German bomber, believed to be a Dornier, this afternoon. There were several casualties.

Houses were demolished when the raider dropped bombs, and there were a number of casualties, some fatal.

During the evening alert high-explosive bombs were dropped in a residential area of London. Rescue squads were quickly at work on two houses which were damaged.

THE PROVINCES

A low-flying raider dropped five bombs on a Midland town this afternoon. One fell on enclosed premises, but did virtually no damage. The others dropped in open country. British fighters were seen chasing the raider. There were no casualties.

Whilst chased by British fighters over two East Anglian towns in the early afternoon a raider dropped fifteen bombs. All but one fell in the gardens of houses. The other fell in a carriage-way. During the chase there was heavy machine-gun fire, which caused people in the streets to seek shelter.

A single German raider, flying a few feet above the roof-tops, machine-gunned several streets in a working-class district of an East Anglian town. Bullets and broken glass flew into scores of rooms where families were having their tea, but no one was seriously injured. Mr. H. W. Smith, a seventy-one-year-old pensioner, was having tea with his housekeeper, Mrs. E. Simpson, also aged seventy-one, when a bomb penetrated their living room and exploded. Both escaped injury.

LAST SPEECHES IN U.S. ELECTION

Party Chairmen's Forecasts

THE National Chairmen of the Democratic and Republican Parties both predict, as the Presidential election campaign in the United States entered its last hectic stage, substantial victories for their candidate, says a Reuter message from New York last night.

The Republican candidate for the Vice-Presidency, Senator Charles McNary, pledged, in the closing speech of his campaign at Sacramento, California, on Saturday night, that, whatever the result of Tuesday's election, "all will support the Administration in power as only a unified America can be a well-defended America."

President Roosevelt and Mr. Wendell Willkie also delivered their final major speeches last night.

The Democratic Chairman computed that Roosevelt would get at least 427 of the 531 votes in the Electoral College; that he would carry the coveted New York State by a popular majority of between four hundred and five hundred thousand votes, and that Willkie would get a maximum of nine States.

The Republican Chairman gave Willkie at least 324 of the electoral votes, declared that he would sweep every section of the country except the "solid South," and forecast that the Republicans would capture control of the House of Representatives by gaining 60 seats, to give them a majority of ten, and also gain ten to twelve seats in the Senate.

FEELING RUNNING HIGH

Election fever rose to a peak throughout the country at the week-end, as 50,000,000 eligible voters awaited only the election eve radio addresses before casting the momentous vote on Tuesday. President Roosevelt returned to Washington yesterday to confer with Mr. Cordell Hull, his Secretary of State, and Mr. Sumner Welles, the Under-Secretary. Last night he left for his Hyde Park estate where he will remain until after the election.

Mr. Willkie, who received one of the greatest demonstrations in the history of New York City when he addressed his final major rally at Madison Square Garden, will also stay at his home until after the election.

Both candidates appear confident of victory. A landslide one way or the other is always possible, but the consensus of opinion here is that the polling will be close, with Mr. Roosevelt holding the advantage. It may be, it is thought, as close as Mr. Wilson's election in the Great War, to which, indeed, this campaign bears some resemblance.

CANDIDATES' TOURS

The increased registrations of voters in most parts of the country indicate that the electorate is unusually alive this time to the issues in what has become known here as "The Battle of America." Street corner orators, armed only with a flag and a pair of steps, have sprung up like mushrooms everywhere in New York City, inspiring small crowds with their heated political debates.

Groups, spontaneously collected, linked arms and paraded the streets of New York chanting their party cry. Mr. Willkie has covered nearly 30,000 miles by air, rail and road through 34 states in the most strenuous campaign of the century. It is estimated that he has appeared before no fewer than 12,000,000 persons and made over 500 speeches.

Mr. Roosevelt, on the other hand, tied to Washington by his official duties, has reached only to New York, Boston and Cleveland, Ohio, apart from his 5,000-mile "defence inspection" tours, which his opponents labelled "political."

His supporters gave their rivals warm receptions, and a significant feature of the campaign was the variety of missiles, including eggs and tomatoes, aimed at Mr. Willkie.

Both parties denounced it, but observers believe that each egg possibly cost the Democrats a quantity of votes.

WILLKIE MEETING SURPRISE

ARMED PHYSICIAN ARRESTED

The arrest of an armed man in Madison Square Garden towards the close of Mr. Willkie's rally on Saturday night has been reported by the police. He is alleged to have been seen to transfer a revolver from an inside pocket to a side pocket, as he approached the platform. He was only a few feet from Mr. Willkie when the police seized and disarmed him. The man, who is described as about seventy years of age, gave his name as "Mr. Ward."

A married couple sitting behind the man allege that they saw him transfer the revolver from one pocket to another as he rose and started towards the platform, where Mr. Willkie and his wife were waving to the cheering crowds. The couple immediately informed the police, who seized the man and found a fully-loaded revolver.

A woman who was just behind the prisoner when he was arrested said that he was a New York physician. She added that she was sure he did not mean any harm.

The police have refused to divulge the identity of this woman, who has apparently also been taken into custody.

PRESIDENT'S THIRD TERM DECISION

INFLUENCED BY WORLD STORM

President Roosevelt, in his last major election campaign speech at Cleveland, Ohio, on Saturday night, declared that the storm now raging over the world was the true reason why he was running for a third term.

When that term is over, he added, there will be another President. He disavowed any personal ambition.

He appealed to the nation to give him a vote of confidence on Tuesday, adding: "There is a great storm raging now, it makes things harder for the world, and that storm, which has not started in this land of ours, is the true reason I would like to stick by these people of ours until we reach the clear, sure footing ahead. We will make it before the next term is over. We will make it, and the world, we hope, will make it, too."

Presdient Roosevelt declared that representatives of the forces of the Dictatorships "in our own land," forces whom he identified as the Communists, on the one hand, and the "Girdlers," on the other hand, were voting without exception against the New Deal.

MARCHING FORWARD

There are certain forces within our national community, he said, composed of men who call themselves American, but who would destroy America. It is their constant purpose, as in other lands, to weaken democracy and destroy the free man's faith in his own cause.

The President did not define the "Girdlers," or explain the origin of the word.

He then asserted that the American people for the past seven years had marched forward from the wilderness of depression and despair right up to the very threshold of the future —a future which holds the fulfilment of their hopes for real freedom, real prosperity, and real peace.

"I want that march to continue for four years more," he added.

In a detailed discussion on the Administration's foreign policy, the President said that it was its first purpose to keep the country out of war. At the same time, he declared, we seek to keep foreign conceptions of government out of the United States. The second purpose of this policy, he continued, was to keep war far away from the shores of the entire Western Hemisphere; also our policy is to give all possible material aid to the nations which still resist aggression across the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

The President said that the Americans will never submit to domination or influence by Nazism and Communism, or either.

FOREIGN POLICY

We look at the old world of Europe, he said. It is an ugly world, poisoned by hatred, greed and fear. We can see what has been the inevitable consequence of that poison—war.

"We know that we are determined to defend our country, and, with our neighbours, to defend this hemisphere. We are strong in our defence; every hour, every day we grow stronger. There is nothing secret about our foreign policy. It is not secret from the American people, and it is not secret from any Government in the world. I have stated many times before. I now restate it."

President Roosevelt added that the policy included efforts to promote such friendly relations with the Latin and American nations and Canada, that the great Powers of Europe and Asia will know that they cannot divide the peoples of this hemisphere one from another. If the human race is to survive the world must find a way by which men and nations can live together in peace.

"We cannot accept the doctrine that war must for ever be a part of man's destiny."

The President declared that Americans would defend their freedom against the forces of the Dictatorships, whatever disguises and false facts they may wear.

THE NEW DEAL

Outlining what the New Deal had done for America, he said: "The forward march of democracy is under way; its advance must not stop. The Democrats intend to build up the United States by a programme which would make them prosperous, free and strong; to be the light of the world and a comfort to all people, and all the forces of evil shall not prevail against it."

The President concluded his speech by saying that the Americans in building their future will prove that their faith is strong enough to survive the most fearsome storms that have ever swept across the earth.

"In the days and months and years to come we shall be making history, hewing out a new shape for the future, and we shall make very sure that it bears the likeness of Democracy.

"The spirit of the common people is the spirit of peace and goodwill. It is the spirit of God, and in His faith is the strength of America."

Mr. Roosevelt's allusion to the "Girdlers" is presumably a reference to Tom Girdler, the steel magnate, whose name is very well known as leader of the steel masters in their tug of war with labour and as one of the President's constant critics.—(Reuter.)

TO CREATE A NEW AMERICA

MR. WILLKIE'S PLEDGE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Saturday.

Mr. Wendell Willkie accused the Roosevelt Administration of leading the nation down a road paved with good intentions to the destruction of their democratic way of life in his last major election campaign speech at Madison Square Garden to-night.

"I say it," he added solemnly, "and with a full understanding of the terrible meaning of the words."

Mr. Willkie declared that he believed with the New Deal in collective bargaining, the wage and hour legislation, social security, help of Britain and powerful national defence.

But, he added, the New Deal methods are not the methods of democracy. These methods, he declared, stood for unlimited spending of borrowed money, the piling up of bureaucracy, the usurpation of power reserved by Congress, the subjugation of the Courts, the concentration of enormous authority in the hands of the Executive, the discouragement of enterprise, and continuous economic dependence for millions of their citizens upon the Government.

"I will defend always, and have defended, the rights and civil liberties of all people, regardless of race, creed and colour," he added.

Mr. Willkie pledged himself to create a new America.

HELP FOR BRITAIN

Of Britain Mr. Willkie said specifically :—"All of us—Republicans, Democrats and Independents—believe in giving aid to the heroic British people. We must make available to them the products of our industries. The people of Britain are fighting against tremendous odds for the freedom of individuals—the sacred right of free men to self-government and to tolerance, freedom of speech, of Press and religion. They stand in desperate battle to protect the ideal of a society in which the Government is the servant of the people.

"Both parties talk about helping Britain. We really mean it. We do not want to help her just on order. We will give her continuing production from expanding industries."

Mr. Willkie charged President Roosevelt with declaring sixty-seven emergencies, and thereby gathering into his hands powers rightfully belonging to Congress.

Elsewhere in his speech Mr. Willkie declared that there is no place in this crusade for Communists, Fascists and Nazis.

FRENCH SAILORS GOING HOME

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.

LONDON, Sunday.

Four ships, including liners and hospital ships, are en route from France to Britain to repatriate sailors of the French Navy and mercantile marine who wish to go home, an officer of the French Admiralty said over the Lyons radio last night. Two more ships are to follow, he added.

MILK AS A SOURCE OF INFECTION

CORK AND TIPPERARY VIEWS

FURTHER views on Dr. Mushatt's work under the Medical Research Council regarding bovine tuberculosis and its transmission to human being through the medium of milk are given to-day from Medical Officers of Health in Cork and Tipperary.

Dr. Robert Condy, Cork County Medical Officer of Health, said: "Most medical men and veterinary surgeons recognise that the existing legislation dealing with the control of milk supplies has so far been largely ineffective in securing the detection and elimination of tuberculous milch cows and the sale of infected milk to the public. There seems little inclination on the part of dairymen to undertak the production of milk under a special designation licence, nor is there much inducement to the dairyman, from an economic point of view, for the production of milk of a safe standard, as this commodity appears to be rapidly approaching a price which in many cases places it beyond the capacity of the poorer classes to obtain in sufficient quantity. In Cork County, for example, only six creameries have so far obtained licences to sell pasteurised milk, and of the numerous contractors under the free milk schemes milk from a tuberculin-tested herd was obtainable in only one instance over the past year.

OBVIOUS DEFECTS

"The absence of any control over premises from which milk is sold to creameries only, and over the supplies from small farmers not coming within the scope of the Milk and Dairies Act, and whose cattle are often, undoubtedly, infected with tuberculosis, seem to be obvious defects in the recent Milk and Dairies Act.

"I thoroughly endorse the plea for pasteurisation of milk supplies, as advocated by Dr. Mushatt and others, as a compulsory measure in the case of milk supplies to all cities and towns. The application of this measure to scattered rural areas would, of course, present difficulties, but they should not be insurmountable."

Dr. J. C. Saunders, Cork City Medical Officer of Health, said: "Dr. Mushatt's work is interesting, inasmuch as it reveals the proportion of juvenile tuberculosis in Ireland attributable to the bovine bacillus, but it would be wrong to apply terms such as "revelations" to his findings, and I am quite sure that he is the last person to desire such appellations."

Quoting figures, Dr. Saunders indicated that there was little or no difference between the figures for infected milk as between Ireland and England.

Pointing out that any considerable proportion of infected milk reaching creameries was liable to infect a much larger proportion and be re-distributed as skim-milk, he thought a considerable amount of tuberculosis in cattle was due to the feeding to calves of skim-milk. "Hence we are forced to the conclusion that a corresponding proportion of tuberculosis affecting children may be traced to creameries."

CONTROL NEEDED

"The question of pasteurisation is once more brought to the forefront. Much has been said for and against on this question. On the whole it may be said that pasteurisation is a useful expedient for the protection of urban communities against the dangers inherent in milk produced under loose control. It involves, however, centralisation, and, as we have seen in the case of creameries, centralisation is not without its perils. Unless control is constant and rigid, the system is liable to be far more dangerous than the one it has supplanted. It is a danger inherent in all forms of centralisation. When there is any breakdown the subsequent ill-effects are much more extensive and far-reaching than they would otherwise have been.

SOUTH TIPPERARY VIEWS

When Dr. Martin Naughton, M.D., D.P.H., was interviewed by the Clonmel representative of the Irish Times, he said that Dr. Mushatt's deduction that 32.20 per cent. or roughly one-third, of all the cows slaughtered in the Dublin Corporation Abattoir in 1938 were found to be tuberculous struck him very forcibly. The statement that it was the opinion of veterinary surgeons that, approximately, one-fourth of the million and a quarter milch cows in the country were tuberculous, and of those the greater number had been in Munster was interesting. The Agricultural Officer had informed him that the cow population of County Tipperary (S.R.) was approximateiy 60,000. Accordingly, they should expect as a minimum 15,000 tuberculous cows. Yet the number of cows slaughtered in the county last year under the Bovine Tuberculosis Order was only 239. As in man, so also in stock, some breeds are more resistent than others—notably, the Kerry. Considering the magnitude of the problem, the matter of destruction of such a high percentage of the live stock was one that could scarcely be considered yet.

Dr. Naughton entirely concurred with the views of Dr. Maughan, Superintendent, M.O.H., Waterford, as to the desirability of pasteurisation. If pasteurisation was carried out in towns and in the larger creameries it would considerably reduce the amount of tuberculosis caused by infected milk. Furthermore, the process of pasteurisation would help to eliminate the danger of milk-borne typhoid and certain other kindred infections, of which he has had more than one ugly experience.

HOLD-UP NEAR DALKEY

BAKER'S VANMAN ROBBED

At 9.45 on Saturday night last while Richard Butler, of Corrig road, Dalkey, County Dublin, an employé of Messrs. Connolly's Bakery, Dalkey, was returning home after his day's delivery he was held up by two armed and masked men on the Ballinclea road. One of the men fired a shot from a revolver, the other caught and stopped the horse. Butler was ordered to hand over the day's takings. He handed over a leather bag which he was wearing around his shoulders, containing about 10s., and the robbers made off.

Butler, however, had about £35 concealed on his person and this he subsequently handed to his employers. There was considerable police activity in Cabinteely, Shankill and the metropolitan area following the incident, but no arrest has so far been made.

Feeding Stuffs to be Rationed.—Dr. G. S. Scott Robertson, Secretary to the Northern Ministry of Agriculture, speaking at a luncheon of the Ulster Farmers' Union in Belfast on Saturday, said that the proposed scheme for rationing feeding stuffs would ensure that they got the feeding stuffs to which they were entitled, and that they would be beholden to nobody for them. Sir Basil Brooke, Minister of Agriculture, said that it would hearten them to know that flax showed the largest increase over pre-war prices of any commodity—roughly 150 per cent. If by any chance the mills were to close down, they would have a state of unemployment which might mean the wrecking of the whole industry.

NIGHT RAID ON BERLIN

BIGGEST THAT THE CITY HAS KNOWN

A fire in Berlin on Friday was seen 150 miles away through layers of cloud by R.A.F. crews returning after delivering the two heaviest bombings the German capital has ever known, says a P.A. War Special.

Three of the city's main railway centres were repeatedly hit during the raids. The first started at eight p.m., the earliest yet, and as incendiaries exploded in the wreckage there began some of the greatest fires ever seen by British airmen over Germany. Tons of explosives fell on one station during thirty minutes of non-stop attacks.

A fire, estimated to cover a quarter of a mile square, raged when the Klingenburg Power Station got fifteen minutes concentrated bombing. It spread to nearly a mile long, and was still growing when the raiders left the city. One aircraft detailed to attack the Charlottenburg Power Station found earlier colleagues had started such a tremendous fire that the airmen dropped their bombs on a railway yard instead.

Aerodromes, oil plants, Krupps Arms Works, and the Cape Gris Nez guns were also attacked during the night.

NO OPERATIONS ON SATURDAY NIGHT

The Press Association understands that because of bad weather R.A.F. bombers carried out no operations on Saturday night.

£1,200 FROM PARISH "DRAW"

PRIEST PRAISES NORTHERN GOVERNMENT

Presiding at a "draw" at Magherarry, Co. Monaghan, in aid of the Newtownbutler parochial funds, the Rev. T. Maguire, P.P., Newtownbutler, paid tribute to the Northern Ireland Government and Censor for the consideration shown to him in the handling of letters which he had received from all over the world in connection with the draw. The Northern Ireland Censor, he stated, had been very decent with him, and he wished to thank him very sincerely. Father Maguire said that he would have sold thousands more tickets in America and other countries only the people wrote to him saying that they were afraid that he would not receive the money, as he was living under the Northern Ireland Government. He had written numerous letters assuring these people that the Northern Ireland Government had promised not to interfere with any money sent to him. Father Maguire announced that he had realised a profit of £1,200 as a result of the "draw."

DUCHESS OF KENT AT GREEK SERVICE

The Duchess of Kent, who was accompanied by Mme. Simopoulos, the wife of the Greek Minister, yesterday attended a Service of Intercession for Greece, held by the Greek colony in London at the Cathedral Church of St. Sophia, Moscow road, Bayswater. Archbishop Germanos, of Thyateira, the bishop of the Greeks in Western Europe, conducted the Service. Special prayers invoked protection and help for Greece; and a very old one petitioned that Greece might be granted victory.

The Duchess of Kent was the first of the congregation to receive from the Archbishop the blessed bread and to kiss, according to the custom of the Greek Orthodox Church, the cross the Archbishop held in one hand.

THE BROADER STRATEGY OF THE WAR

BY OUR MILITARY CORRESPONDENT.

It is not often that we get anything so refreshingly outspoken about "war aims" as the recent Italian reiteration of old claims—whether "official" or not. After the crop of rumours and conjectures we have been regaled with, it was like a fresh breeze in a smoke-polluted room.

The claims attributed to Italy were:—

From Britain, Malta and the Suez Canal—which, strictly, is international; but no matter.

From France, Savoy, Nice, Corsica, Tunis and Djibouti.

Regarding the last of these, the present writer—nearly two years ago, when Franco-Italian tension was acute—suggested the possibility of a friendly "deal" on the score of Djibouti. After the conquest of Abyssinia there was really no sense in France holding on to the harbour. However, to come back to the Italian claims. The first—and the last—thing to observe about them is that they are entirely strategic. Except Djibouti and Suez, there is not one with any economic value—hardly even Tunisia. Some would economically be a distinct liability. But in the military sense they form such a strategic ensemble as could nowhere else be equalled. They would mean complete and undisputed control of practically all the Mediterranean and the Middle East as well. Let us take them in order from West to East.

NICE

Savoy gives the upper valleys of the Rhone and Isère—i.e., the gateway to Lyons and South-Central France. Nice, to us in Ireland, meant the most difficult of all International Horse Shows—for wealthier folk it connoted a "posh" winter resort. It is also, however, a great entrenched camp and covers the naval port of Villefranche. Corsica—besides being the birthplace of Napoleon—would complete the Italian grip on the Tyrrhenian Sea. Tunis would similarly complete the control of the Central Mediterranean, which Malta would reinforce. Suez is the link between the Near and Middle Easts, while Djibouti closes the Red Sea at the other end.

But Britain is not free to turn all her war effort against Italy. Germany remains the principal adversary all the time. The projected or threatened invasion across the narrow seas may be—and most likely is—out of the question for this year. But the same is by no means the case about raids (i.e., small-scale invasions) across the open seas in the North. Ever so often we hear of German supply ships being attacked off the coast of Norway—and there must be many more that escape attack, or even observation.

ICELAND

The news-item—for it attracted just that much attention—that Lord Gort had returned from a fortnight's tour of inspection in Iceland was issued last week. Even allowing that Iceland is fairly extensive—as big as Ireland plus Wales—and that the roads are bad, a fortnight is quite a considerable length of time to spend inspecting it. The British cannot afford to forget that Germany has now certainly 250 divisions in one place or another.

The most varied strategical plans are freely attributed to the Axis Powers. For example, there is the suggestion of a vast winter offensive in the Balkans. The present weather troubles of the Italians in Epirus give a line on this. And then there is the suggestion of a march through France and Spain to Gibraltar. It does not seem to have occurred to anybody that the Axis leaders—being eminently practical—may spend this winter, as they did the last, in preparing for next year. Why, for instance, should they not prepare an aerial invasion of Britain, in view of the fact that the sea one did not materialise?

INITIATIVE

It must be remembered that the Axis continues to retain the advantage of the initiative. Britain and her Allies are still constrained to parry attacks: and she is, further, compelled in the first instance to solidly maintain her home defences. In this respect she is indeed doing well. The organisation of London—the biggest and-most exposed target in existence—to counter air-raids is a remarkable achievement. Such bodies as the Auxiliary Firemen, Auxiliary Pioneers; such relief services as that of provincial 'buses, additional river steamers, etc. All these show that the second line, as it were, is being looked after. Meantime the A.-A. barrage is being thickened and deepened, the warning system "rationalised," the balloons improved the evacuations accelerated. The inevitable lulls in the winter will allow of all these measures to take effect. It is highly improbable that attacks relatively as damaging will be experienced again.

COUNTER-STROKES

So far, however, all British counter strokes have been limited to air raids on the Axis countries and the territories they occupy. Beyond question these have achieved certain results—and that at very little cost, relatively speaking. Furthermore, the acquisition of such additional material as the great Boeing "flying fortresses" and improved bombing-sights would appreciably increase the military efficacy of such raids. But they would not render them decisive. In the most favourable conditions Britain can scarcely hope, in 1941, to do more than reverse the 1940 air situation as against Germany. A superiority that did not succeed in one case is unlikely to do so in the other.

And there is always the warfare on commerce. Sinkings for the third week in October were very high, indeed—198,000 tons of all nationalities. This manifestly means that the amount of naval strength which can be assigned to counter-attack measures is limited. Thus, it seems probable that the very high sinkings last announced must be attributed—in part, at least—to the action of surface raiders operating far afield. The "bags" of such, from the nature of the case, can only be announced at intervals. The British, however, are now at the time when their great new construction programme is beginning to take effect. Their relative standing will improve progressively from now on: barring the surrender of the French Fleet to Germany, this is inevitable. In this connection it may be remarked that the U.S.A. is quite clear that the ships at Fort de France, Martinique, shall not be included in any such deal—i.e., the aircraft-carrier Béarn (22,150 tons, eight 6-inch guns, 40 'planes, 21.5 knots) and the light cruiser Jeanne d'Arc (6,500 tons, eight 6-inch guns, 27 knots).

ST. JOHN AMBULANCE BRIGADE

SAVING OF WASTE PAPER

Waste paper collected in Dublin for the St. John Ambulance Brigade has realised £165, according to a statement made by the honorary organiser of the collection (Mrs. W. R. Nolan) at a recent meeting of her helpers. She referred to the work of organising the collection of full sacks—each sack represents four shillings—and appealed for the saving of more waste paper.

Sir John Lumsden praised the work of Mrs. Nolan and her helpers and said that he would like the money they collected to go towards the purchase of a mobile canteen for the use of the Brigade.

AIR LOSSES COMPARED

TWELVE WEEKS OF FIGHTING

During the past twelve weeks of the attack on Great Britain the German Air Force has lost three aircraft and fourteen airmen for every one of Britain's, states the British Air Ministry News Service.

Since August 8, when the first big air battle was fought around British coasts, fighters, gunners, balloon barrage, and other causes have accounted for 2,433 German bombers and fighters.

The most severe blow which the Fighter Command has dealt to the Luftwaffe has been the loss of trained airmen. Allowing the usual number of pilots, observers, and air gunners to the various types destroyed, over six thousand German airmen have been killed or taken prisoner. The Fighter Command has lost only 353 pilots.

Weekly figures reveal a gradual weakening of the German effort in spite of continuously changed tactics.

Their biggest attack, on August 15, by a thousand bombers and protecting fighters resulted in their bomber losses amounting to 234 and 162 fighters.

This was a record victory for seven days' fighting when, during the week, they lost 479 bombers and fighters.

From then on until the present the use of the Junkers dive bombers—hitherto claimed to be Germany's most deadly weapon, but quickly mastered by British fighters—has been gradually abandoned.

During the second week in September only two Junkers 87's were shot down, and since then they completely disappeared until Friday's convoy raid. Even Junkers 88's, the Germans' newest type, have only been coming over in small numbers.

On September 7 the Germans opened their Blitzkrieg on London and lost 103 in that battle.

On September 15 they made a more desperate attempt to crush the Fighter Command defences, but lost 185 aircraft, a new record for a single day's fighting.

On September 27 the Germans made one more big effort and increased the proportion of fighter escorts to four to one, but lost 133 machines, of which 91 were fighters.

JAPANESE LINER IN GALWAY BAY

WILL SAIL ON WEDNESDAY OR THURSDAY

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

GALWAY, Sunday.

Forty passengers and members of the crew of the Japanese liner, Husimi Maru, which is anchored in Galway Bay since Friday night, came ashore to-day and went sightseeing. Among them were many women and children. Several of the passengers played golf on the links at Salthill. Meanwhile 180 Japanese nationals are on their way from Liverpool to join the Husimi Maru and are due to arrive here on Tuesday. The liner is expected to sail on Wednesday evening or Thursday morning. A number of Irish citizens on the Continent were expected to travel to Galway from Lisbon, but only one, Miss Mary Maine, of Coleraine, made the journey.

FEWER PUPILS AND TEACHERS

EIRE'S FINANCES REVIEWED

FACTS IN STATISTICAL ABSTRACT FOR 1940

THE Statistical Abstract for 1940—the very valuable work of reference compiled by the Department of Industry and Commerce—is considerably smaller than in previous years for reasons that will be generally understood. It is pointed out that arising out of the war situation economies have been effected in the amount of detailed statistics prepared for publication. The monthly summary of imports and exports has been suspended since August, 1939, and the annual trade and shipping statistics are not given in the same extensive detail. Also for obvious reasons the same amount of international information is not forthcoming. Otherwise in general layout the volume is substantially the same as in previous years.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS

Imports in the year 1939 amounted to £43,415,139—that is, 4.8 per cent. higher than in the previous year—and, with the exception of 1937, the highest since 1931. Exports in the same year were £26,292,414, or 10.9 per cent. higher than in the previous year, and the highest since 1931. The increase of imports in 1939 was due to increase in bulk, as the prices were practically unchanged; while the increased value of exports was due entirely to increase in prices, there being no increase in volume.

The meteorological section shows that the total rainfall in inches (29.82) at Dublin in 1939 was the highest since 1935, while at Cork (39.66) it was lowest in any year since 1936. The average annual temperature and total rainfall are higher in Cork than in Dublin.

EDUCATIONAL MATTERS

Under the head of Education it is noticed that the number of pupils and teachers has steadily decreased, as well as the number of national schools. Secondary schools have increased in numbers as well as teachers. For every 15 primary schools in the country there is one secondary school.

The number of University students has increased in the last ten years from 2,608 males to 4,001, and from 1,288 females to 1,369. The majority of University students in the professional schools are in the Faculty of Medicine.

The review of the finances of Eire show that in 1939-'40 the total revenue was £32,399,000, an increase over the previous year of £505,000 and an increase of almost £7,000,000 on the figure of 1931-32. Expenditure had been in excess of revenue in each of the last five years—in 1939-40 by over two million pounds.

U.S. AND BRITAIN

There had been a steady decrease in receipts from the United States since 1931-32 due to the economic depression and the lessening of the westward stream of emigrants. The falling off of receipts from the United Kingdom between 1931-32 and 1935-36 was to some extent explained by the economic dispute with Britain.

The section devoted to agriculture and fisheries gives a vast amount of information in relation to the national industry, crops, workers and wages, live-stock statistics and output. There are also elaborate details concerning housing, unemployment, national health, etc., and a review of the position of transport, railways and tramway systems.

"PEOPLE LIVING BEYOND THEIR MEANS"

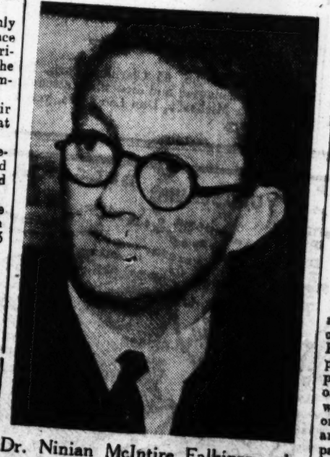
At Cork County Committee of Agriculture on Saturday, Mr. C. J. Halliden proposed:—"That in view of the serious position of the dairying industry we call on the Minister for Agriculture to make immediate provision for an economic price for milk supplied to creameries."

Mr. D. L. O'Gormán said that an enormous subsidy was already being paid to the dairying industry. It would be better to point out that the Government, their officials, and the people of the country were all living beyond their means, and that a reduction in national and local taxation was urgently needed. He added:—"Mr. de Valera recently said that the Army was seven times greater than in peace time—but who is going to pay for it?"

Mr. Halliden said that if the dairying industry was subsidised to the same extent as beet or wheat, the subsidy would be several million pounds.

The resolution was adopted.

NEW MASTER



Dr. Ninian McIntire Falkiner, who succeeds Dr. A. H. Davidson as Master of the Rotunda Hospital, Dublin, is the author of several important medical treatises. He qualified at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1922, became a Fellow of the College of Obstetricians and Gynæcologists in 1930, and a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, Ireland, in 1929. He was formerly Resident Medical Officer at Dr. Steevens's Hospital and Assistant to the Master at the Rotunda.

DANGER STILL REMAINS

MINISTER WARNS PEOPLE

L.S.F. REVIEW AT BOYLE

SPEAKING at Boyle yesterday, when he reviewed 1,800 members of the Local Security Force from Counties Roscommon, Leitrim and Sligo, Mr. G. Boland, Minister for Justice, said that though the war seemed to be moving eastwards he hoped that nobody would be so foolish as to imagine that the danger was gone. As long as the war lasted the danger would be there, he said.

Stating that the display was impressive as any he had seen elsewhere, Mr. Boland said they were all very proud of the response made by the all-party appeal in June. The men had rallied to their country's cause in a marvellous manner. He thought it was true to say that at no time in living memory had there been a movement like this. The movement of 1921 was a great one, but this was one even greater, because they had all sections in it.

They were united for one purpose, if anybody should think of interfering with the country's unity and independence, he would meet with united resistance by the whole people.

In this war, unlike former wars, he continued, any part of the country could be invaded. If it were like former wars they would only have to look to the coast, but now the Midlands were just as liable to attack as the coastline.

ARMS SUPPLY

It was the duty of the people to continue their training. The Gardai had been active in helping, while the military had co-operated magnificently. Undoubtedly, at present there were not sufficient arms for all the men, but recently they had got a considerable consignment of arms, and they hoped to have sufficient for all members in a few months.

He asked them to bear in mind the statement by An Taoiseach that it would be easy to give a man a rifle, but it took a long time to train a soldier. Even though they had not rifles, they could learn the soldier's trade.

If the day of need should come—please God it would not—they would stand together in defence of their country.

He congratulated the officers and men on their splendid turnout.

Mr. J. Dillon, T.D., member of the Defence Council, said that to every servant of Ireland he would say it was an honour and a privilege to have the right to wear a uniform. To those whom circumstances did not permit to wear a uniform he said: "Show by your attitude to the wearers of uniforms that you respect and honour them, and that you are proud to be seen in their company, and to claim them as neighbours and members of your family." (Applause.)

The day had gone when to be a soldier was something to be ashamed of.

The day had come when to be a soldier was something to be proud of, in that the wearer was serving Ireland; and not to be a soldier was something that called for explanation.

FOR IRELAND

Some people might begin to wonder what they were doing for Ireland—what was all the soldiering about.

"I tell you with the fullest sense of responsibility," he declared, "that the work done by the L.S.F. and the Army has materially contributed towards saving the country from an invasion. That was contemplated some months ago. Those who intended to invade would have done so if they had not known that the whole Irish people were united to resist them. It was this knowledge that tipped the scales and saved the country and the people from the throes of war."

Mr Dillon said that the work of the "B" Section was invaluable. The work and success of the "A" Section depended on the efficiency, courage and skill of the "B" Section.

For seven centuries the enemies of Ireland had said that if the people got freedom they would lose it in the first hour of danger by disunity. We have been privileged to live in the first hour of danger that threatened Ireland, and we told the world that for whatever other reason we might lose our freedom, it would not be because of disunity.

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

In a broadcast to crews of German ships in foreign ports, Dr. Goebbels, Reich Minister of Propaganda, said: "We are unable to determine the time which stands between us and the day of victory, but we know that all of us will go through the time to come with the same calm confidence in ultimate victory as hitherto."—(P.A. AIR RAIDS ON MALTA

R.A.F. BOMB ITALIAN TROOPS

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.

CAIRO, Sunday.

To-day's R.A.F. communiqué states:—"Two formations of enemy bombers, escorted by fighters made raids on Malta yesterday, but little damage and no casualties resulted. R.A.F. fighters engaged the enemy, and it is definitely confirmed that an enemy fighter was shot down, another enemy aircraft destroyed by anti-aircraft fire, and two other enemy fighters damaged. Another machine is believed to have been shot down, but there is no confirmation.

"An attack was made by R.A.F. aircraft on enemy transport and troops moving along the Metemma-Gondar road. Four direct hits were registered on transport, and there were also near misses. In the same area an enemy aircraft was forced down and crashed.

"Further reconnaissance flights were carried out over Greek and Italian coastal waters. On the return journey from one of these flights one of our aircraft was attacked by Italian fighters, but it succeeded in shaking them off. Subsequently the same aircraft attacked an enemy flying-boat and is believed to have damaged it.

"On October 25 South African Air Force fighters engaged a flight of three Savoia bombers in the Turkana area in Kenya. Our fighters shot down two of the enemy bombers, but the third succeeded in getting away, although it was damaged by one of our fighters, and it is doubtful whether it reached its base. From all operations our aircraft returned safely."

ROME, Sunday.

The Italian naval base at Tobruk has been bombed seventy-one times by British 'planes since the outbreak of the Italo-British war, an Italian communiqué issued here to-night said, and added: Naval anti-aircraft defence shot down twenty 'planes, and eight more were probably shot down.—(Associated Press.)

Waterford Match Doubts

REFEREE ADMITS MISTAKE

St. James's Gate 2: Cork United 0. (Smith and Bradshaw scored.)
Drumcondra 1: Shelbourne 2. (MacNamara for Drumcondra, Fallon (2).)
Waterford 2: Shamrock Rovers 2. (Cameron (2) for Waterford; Daly (2).
Dundalk 2: Limerick 2. (Reid and Donnelly (pen.) for Dundalk, O'Connor and McAleer.)
Bohemians 4: Brideville 0. (O'Flanagan (2), Glennon and Moore.)

WITH every goal and every point of importance to Waterford and Shelbourne, whose struggle for runners-up position is the most interesting feature of the League of Ireland Shield tables, the week-end results would give Shelbourne the advantage by one point if they were definite. Unfortunately, fourteen minutes short time was played at Waterford and the Council of the F.A.I. will be asked on Wednesday night to decide if the score given above is to be accepted as final, according to Mr. G. P. Whelan, Chairman of the Waterford Club.

The referee admitted his mistake to an Irish Times representative, who interviewed him after the match, but said that he was reporting his mistake to the Football Council. When asked for comment he said that he made a mistake in setting his watch for the second half.

Crowds on the stands were astounded when the referee blew to an end so abruptly a minute or two after Waterford had drawn level. The teams left the dressing rooms, they, referee, linesmen and officials being followed by an angry crowd demanding explanations and asking that full time be played. Civic Guards accompanied the referee and officials to the referee's room, but few spectators left the ground appeared amenable to reason.

After a brief consultation with the officials the referee decided to bring the teams out to play the remaining fourteen minutes, but by this time Shamrock Rovers had left Kilcohan Park and, therefore, there was no possibility of completing the full time.

The match itself was the best and liveliest seen at Kilcohan Park this season. A hot pace was maintained throughout. Neither side held an advantage and raids on both goals were pressed strongly.

GATE SEVERELY TESTED.

At Irish grounds yesterday St. James's Gate had to fight harder than in any previous Shield game to preserve their record of victory after the interval. United were on the offensive for the greater part of the match, and the Gate defence at times looked far from happy. Cork played a fast game, and it was only in the closing few minutes, when the result was beyond doubt, that they showed signs of tiring. At that time the Gate were even more tired.

The game was full of interest. On the play there would have been no injustice if Cork had won. Gate's first goal was scored eight minutes after the interval. The referee changed his mind and gave a corner after he had signalled for a goal kick. Smith got his head to Kennedy's shot from the corner and put the ball fairly and squarely in the net. Twenty-four minutes later Bradshaw, on the chief credit being due to Kennedy, who made a great run on his own and gave the pass.

The goalkeeping of Tully for Cork was one of the features of the game. Flynn, at the other end, also had an excellent match.

The visit at Dalymount was never in doubt when Bohemians changed over with a three clear lead. The Brideville backs were outplayed by five speedy forwards and a reliable, if at times erratic, half-back line, and the visiting forwards were rarely in the picture.

Brideville put up a better game in the second half but their attack continued to lack cohesion and accuracy, and the home defence had little difficulty in more than holding their own to the end of a moderate class game.

FAST GAME AT DUNDALK.

The match at Dundalk was rousing, fast and strenuous from the first kick to the last. Dundalk (Crawley (ill), Reid) played Kelly at centre-half, with Hirst at left full-back. Limerick played as selected, and were the better team in the first half. Their left wing, of Boyle and Foy, was always dangerous, and their accurate centres kept the Dundalk defence defending for long periods.

In fifteen minutes Meek cleared a raid, and from his pass the ball went into the centre, per Boyle. O'Connor took his chance, and from fifteen yards out Cluskey scored the first goal. Harrington saved Limerick towards the close of this half. He tipped a great drive from Donnelly over the bar, and then saved a powerful free by O'Neill from just outside the penalty area. Dundalk's equaliser came in fifteen minutes of the second half. A Donnelly movement on the left resulted in Dwyer centring, and Reid sent in a smashing shot, which Harrington could not possibly reach. Reid was taken down when he was dribbling through, and Donnelly converted the penalty. Limerick fought back with great spirit, and when Regan sent across a centre, McAleer ran past Kelly, and, with a powerful shot from the penalty area beat Cluskey all ends up.

Conditions at Tolka Park could scarcely have been more trying on the players, as a strong breeze blew diagonally across the pitch and rendered accurate ball control extremely difficult. That the teams gave such a good display under the circumstances was remarkable. Shelbourne were the dominant side throughout, despite the robust but decidedly less skilful efforts of the home set to stave off defeat. They had a brilliant inside forward in Holbeach, whose positional play was a feature. Twice he was robbed of a score, each time from a "header," by the barest margin. The real strength of the team lay with their half-backs, Fallon, Harris and Doyle—a trio who defended stoutly, but were ever better in the role of auxiliary forwards as Fallon's two goals show.

There was little wrong with Drumcondra's defence, though it was temporarily weakened by a couple of injuries to Leo Dunne. In other departments the side was earnest, but lacked polish.

Colt of Promise

ETOILE DE LYONS SCORES AT LEOPARDSTOWN

MR. H. M. HARTIGAN'S Etoile de Lyons put up a fine performance when winning the Autumn Plate at Leopardstown on Saturday. Previously the son of Coup de Lyon had won over distances of five and six furlongs, and now, carrying 9st. 6lb., he simply played with his ten opponents over the seven furlongs course. Taking the lead early, he waited in front and drew away in the straight to score by three lengths from Tiverton, with Conclusion, half a length off, third.

Etoile de Lyons is out of Rose of Jericho and was bred by Mr. J. J. Murphy. He has both speed and stays well, is good-looking and upstanding, and is fairly certain to play a prominent part in the three years old races of next year. Indeed, he may well turn out to be the best of his age.

Mr. R. More O'Ferrall, the Kildangan trainer, had two winners for English patrons of his stable. Senator, the property of Captain Reid Walker, won the Kyelmore Hurdle and Sir Percy Loraine's Antrim took the Mallaranny Plate. Senator, as at the previous meeting at the course, set the pace from the start, and on this occasion was never overhauled. Silver Fizz and Piper's Luck were his nearest attendants passing the post.

Antrim's win was not as easily achieved, in fact it was only in the last hundred yards that he came upon the scene to get the best of a rousing finish with Wild Wheat and Empire Warrior. Royal Down, who in the Royal Whip at the Curragh was beaten only by a length by Sir Percy Loraine's colt when meeting him at level weights, now had a pull of 4lb., yet failed to even finish in the first three.

Mikado, on the strength of his second to Cuirm Gail at the Curragh, was made an odds-on favourite for the Renvyle Plate, but, though having every chance of winning, was worn down and beaten in the last half furlong by Coupe and Bray Lady, the former winning by half-a-length. Coupe, who is by the same sire as Etoile de Lyons, belongs to Mr. F. S. Myerscough, who now trains his own horses.

Another favourite to run in disappointing style was Rose of Portugal, a half-sister to Etoile de Lyons, who was in slightly better request than Kingston Gorse and Evora for the Leenane Plate. Quickest away from the gate, she was prominent for a long way, but faded out in the closing stages, and after Oak Boy had looked all over a winner approaching the straight, he, too, failed to sustain the effort, and the lightly-weighted Erin's Call, then taking command, held off the late challenge of Evora to score with a bit in hand. Evora appeared to be a bit unlucky, as she lost her place half-way through the race, and had to come on the outside in the straight, and was travelling faster than any of the others passing the post.

The Clifden Steeplechase attracted only three runners, and with Knight of Venosas falling about a mile from home September came home at his leisure, a distance in front of Yeoman, who had fallen at Naas on the previous day. Details:—

JOINT MASTER OF WARD UNION, MR. ANDREW MOORE

LEICESTER RUNNERS

SOME of the best sprinters will contest the Leicestershire Handicap at Leicester to-day. Antecedent may prove to be the pick of the top weights. He has run well in his four races this season, and at Thirsk made a fine attempt to concede weight to The Pale and Ghar Ullin. Leading Topic is not out of it, even with the penalty picked up at Nottingham, and Malmsey will be difficult to beat if repeating his May form at Newmarket, when he accounted for Arriba Espana and Mickey the Greek. Scottish Archer has done nothing so far to encourage hopes of a win here, but Cari will be fancied on her performance at the last meeting at Oadby. She ran Davy Dolittle to a neck, but the race was over seven furlongs, and the shorter distance here will suit her and also Azam Pasha, who was then close up with the leaders. The vote is for Azam Pasha.

BELFAST TEAM'S RUGBY WIN

OLD Belvedere and Queen's University, at Jones's road, lived up to their reputation for keeping play open, but the Belvedere backs, who got far more of the ball, made a sorry mess of many rather intricate movements they attempted, and the more individual efforts of the visiting backs met with little success. Allowance, however, must be made for a strong wind and rather heavy going.

Queen's, who were without their regular half-backs, were rather fortunate to win by a goal and two tries to a penalty goal and two tries, for V. Aird missed the easiest of place kicks to level the scores with the last kick of the match, and the winners were made a present of five points by G. Quinn dropping the ball behind his own line. Belvedere also played nearly all the second half without N. McNelis (injured).

The Belvedere forwards scrummaged very well, and had a few rousing rushes, in which J. Belton, P. O'Sullivan, D. O'Brien and J. O'Neill showed up, but the visiting forwards were faster, and tackled splendidly. G. J. Morgan got the ball away with all his old artistry, but neither he nor P. J. Quinn made much effort to draw the defence, with the result that the burden of making openings was thrown on the centres. Unfortunately, G. Quinn, who was injured early on, was off his game, and, although J. Byrne did get places at times he generally finished up weakly.

D. Thorpe did great work in defence in the second half at full-back, and he cleverly interposed in attack on occasions.

Nearly all the Queen's back were very quick off the mark, and his ability in this direction often took J. D. Monteith through a gap, but he never could really get clear, and was often tackled in possession. W. J. Higson got few chances, but was not nearly as enterprising as he was at Lansdowne road recently. W. D. McFarland and Crowe were a more than useful pair of half-backs, and prominent forwards were R. F. Logan, F. H. Cromey, G. C. Irwin and S. McRoberts.

Bird (penalty goal) and Byrne (try) scored Belvedere's points in the first half, during which they did nine-tenths of the attacking. The winners' first try was obtained by their forwards pushing a scrum over the line and falling on the ball in a heap. McConnell had only to fall on the ball when G. Quinn dropped it behind the line, and McFarland goaled. This was quickly followed by a good try, scored by Irwin, after McFarland had completely beaten the defence.

B. Quinn scored in the last minute for Belvedere, after the best combined movement of the game. Aird's kick failed.

LAST-MINUTE SCORE

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY 3 LANSDOWNE..... 0

After an interesting and well-contested game at Lansdowne road, Dublin University defeated Lansdowne by 1 penalty goal to nil. The result looked almost certain to be a scoreless draw; but in the very last minute Trinity, who had been attacking, were awarded a free kick, and E. A. Carry brought off a goal to give their side a three points victory. It was a quite a bright game, and both back divisions had some neat bouts of passing. There was very little between the sides, but the University just about deserved their success, as their backs were more dangerous and their pacing was sharper than that of the Lansdowne rear division. The home side missed their clever centre, J. Cagney, and his place was filled by F. Warren, the C.U.S. boy, and it must be said he acquitted himself well.

Both packs played up with dash, and if the Trinity men were the cleverer in the tight, the Lansdowne eight showed up well in the loose. E. A. Carry and H. de Lacy carried off the honours at half-back, and K. McIntyre and D. R. Doyle, on the Trinity side, and T. Prendiville and J. O'Dwyer, Lansdowne, were the pick of the respective three-quarter lines. Both full-backs, C. Murphy and P. Anderson, kicked with good length and tackled safely.

ONE TRY DECIDES

OLD WESLEY ..... 3 SECTIVE RANGERS ... 0

The pace and clever dribbling ability of R. E. McCrirck acquired a try for Old Wesley, following a breakdown in passing in the match against Bective Rangers at Donnybrook on Saturday. Goal points were not added, but the try was decisive; it was obtained well on in the first half. Both back divisions were weak, but the packs were excellent, and as evenly matched as could be. Each side had long periods of attack, and there was little nothing between them. Bective being unlucky not to score at least once, several chances being allowed to slip, and one good drop at goal missing by inches.

A rearrangement in the second half, when V. Sherry was brought from centre to scrum-half, provided Wolfe, the Wesley scrum-half with more of a problem than in the first period, during which he was dominant. Forde, the Bective stand-off, made gallant efforts to open up, but it did not turn the scale, though K. Doyle, on the wing, made some keen dashes for the line. Gleun, Magill, and the Poldens were the pick of the fine Old Wesley pack, and Wolfe, Bennett and McCririck stood out among the backs. O'Brien, O'Meara and Greene were impressive Bective forwards.

DRAW AT CORK

U.C.C. ..... 3 U.C.D. 3

At the Mardyke, University College, Cork, and University College, Dublin, played a draw of three points each. O'Brien kicked a penalty goal for U.C.C. and O'Flanagan scored a try for U.C.D.

U.C.D. were a man short in the pack, but even this handicap should not have caused their forwards to be so utterly routed in scrums and in the loose, as was the case. The Cork pack were a much more lively lot, and they secured territorial advantage all through the game. The one thing they could not do was pierce the Dubliners' stout defence, and conditions were such that they could expect little help from their backs. Bad

MR. JACK B. YEATS

LECTURE BY MR. C. P. CURRAN, K.C.

"By the common consent of his colleagues, Mr. Jack B. Yeats is the head and front of Irish painting—the greatest living Irish painter," said Mr. C. P Curran, K.C., in the course of a lecture yesterday afternoon at the galleries of Contemporary Pictures, 133 Lower Baggot street, Dublin, where an exhibition of Jack B. Yeats's works are now on view.

The lecturer, however, denied that there was such a thing as a school of Irish painting. School was a term that conveyed nothing: it was a convenient device to indicate a painter's birthplace. but otherwise was imprecise.

He went on to trace the development of Irish painting from the portrait painters to the growth in the middle of the nineteenth century of a group of genre painters, mentioning such names as Petrie, Burtou, Crowley and Haverty. After them came a group who displayed greater technical equipment. Among these stood high the names of Hone, Osborn and Orpen. These, said the lecturer, were painters and nothing but painters.

Mr. Curran then spoke of Jack Yeats's early life in Sligo, and the early flair he showed for drawing and painting. There are extant drawings which he did at the early age of six years. Yeats worked first in line drawing, then water colours and oils, before proceeding to London, where he studied at the Westminster Art School and later at Mexican Joe's Circus at Earls Court.

That was in the nineties of the last century. At this time he contributed drawings to a number of London papers, such as Punch and The Sketch, and also wrote plays and made and painted stage scenery. He held his first exhibition in Dublin in 1899. This was confined to drawings and water colours. He did not show his first oil painting until 1906. These early works were marked by a fine line of drawing, and in his early oils he carefully preserved a balance equally between colour and form, using local colour almost exclusively. By the middle of the twenties of this century he developed his new manner. In his latest style there was a double advance, and he massed from local colour through impressionism, and took his stand for a time on what appeared to be the borders of expressionism. In his style of broken impressionism he applied his pigment, not in the bright-pointed calculated manner of the Pontillists, but with a broad brush.

Mr. Curran illustrated his remarks by reference to some of the paintings hanging in the gallery, and said that the central feature of Yeats's work was his hatred of clichés. The commonplace that bound so many of them did not bind Mr. Yeats, and for that reason it was completely out of place to use the term "school" in discussing his work. There was an absence of formula in his work—his painting was a continual improvisation.

RAG

Trinity College, Dublin; the Bank of Ireland, and Nelson Pillar were attacked on Saturday afternoon by units of the Swiss and Irish navies, but the ancient buildings were unmoved, and Nelson had seen better ships in his time. The ships were armed with squibs and manned by a motley assortment of University College students, and the general idea behind the attack was to interrupt traffic and to collect funds for the St. Vincent de Paul Society. In both objects the students were eminently successful, the sales of The National Rooster adding considerably to the booty.

On average the "rag" was as good as usual, but there were some better than usual topical "cracks." The bewigged District Justice, seated on his bench hammering away in protest while youth jitterbugged in the body of a lorry caused much amusement.

PRESENTATION TO SENATOR DOUGLAS

SERVICES TO LINEN AND COTTON INDUSTRIES

At the annual meeting of the Linen and Cotton Manufacturers of Eire, just held, Senator James G. Douglas was re-elected chairman, and Mr. Charles Gallen was re-elected vice-chairman.

The members paid a warm tribute to Senator Douglas, and made him a presentation of a pair of silver salvers, made by the Dublin craftsman, John Lloyd, in 1780. In a vellum accompanying the presentation, which was signed by every firm in the industry, it was stated of Senator Douglas: "Irrespective of your interest in one particular concern, you have on all occasions borne steadfastly in mind the larger interests of the industry as a whole, rather than the smaller interests of the individual. The measure of success atttained in the development of the industry has depended in a very large degree on the initiative, knowledge and foresight which you have invariably displayed."

MR. ALLEN'S TRIBUTE

In making the presentation Mr. Bertram E. Allen (Drogheda) dwelt on the signal services which Senator Douglas had rendered, not alone to the linen and cotton industry, but also in the wider matters of State development and policy. He referred to those services as "the able work of an able citizen, freely and unstintingly given." Mr. Allen also referred to the tribute paid to Senator Douglas in the recently published book of Mr. O'Sullivan on the Senate. He quoted from the review of that book in the Irish Times, which described Senator Douglas as "one of a small band of keen, public-spirited and enthusiastic Senators, whose activities had prevented the Senate from dying 'a natural death from inanition.'"

All present endorsed the sentiments of Mr. Allen, and Senator Douglas returned thanks.

The vellum was signed by: Messrs. J. Cole (Apex Manufacturing Co.), Frank D. Acheson (Dundalk Linen Co.), C. J. Gallen (Gallen and Co.), Eustace J. Shott (General Textiles), Anthony Cowdy (Greenmount and Boyne Co.), J. E. Duckworth (Naas Cotton Mills), T. L. McElderry (Slane Manufacturing Co.), and Bertram E. Allen (Robert Usher and Co.).

DUBLIN HURLERS STILL WINNING

(By PAT'O.)

DUBLIN ..... 8-5 GALWAY 3-4

Galway opened so brightly at Croke Park yesterday that Dublin's League leadership was threatened. The young western side played fast, vigorous hurling and led 6 points to one after a quarter of an hour. Then came a devastating run of Dublin goals—four in a row. Galway lacked Dublin's polish in the second half, and the Liffeymen ran out comfortable winners. They have collected the full six points from three games, and look certain to reach the final, where they are likely to meet either Kilkenny or the holders, Cork.

The first score was a point to Dublin by Wade. Flaherty equalised, and Forde sent Galway ahead with a goal, this being followed by two points for Galway. Then McDonnell, Maher, McSweeney and Downes goaled for Dublin, and Gray and Wade added points, leaving Dublin with a half-time lead of 4-3 to 1-3.

Downes was hurling well in Dublin's left corner, and he gave Nolan no chance with a grand shot. Wade, Mooney and Brophy stretched Dublin's lead but interest was kept alive when O'Flaherty found the Dublin net. After Downes had goaled for Dublin the speedy Connaught hurlers, led by Loughnane, tore through, and Costelloe's free went straight to the net. Dublin's smoother hurling brought further scores from Maurice McDonnell, who crowned a good hour's play with a goal.

MISS DAVIDSON'S PICTURES

EXHIBITION AT 7 ST. STEPHEN'S GREEN

Paintings by Miss Lilian Davidson, A.R.H.A., are always of pleasurable interest. Opportunity to indulge in such pleasure is afforded this week by the exhibition of forty of Miss Davidson's pictures at No. 7 St. Stephen's Green, Dublin. Human sympathy is an elemental urge in her outlook. She loves the world more than the earth. Nature, however beauteous, is the more beautiful in her sight when those for whom it was made—men, women or children—people the scene. How admirably has her artistic sympathy composed the harmonic setting of the drab gathering in No. 15, "Music Lovers, Rouen." Humble folk have crowded in under the dark shade of heavy foliage embraced in a Southern evening blue, while dimly, by artificial light, faces appear, absorbed in the music from somewhere without the view. The touch of red in the girl's hat in the foreground makes every tone kin.

A luminous mistiness mellows the mountain hues in the background of No. 16, "Cavalcade," where joyous boys mounted on turf-laden donkeys are clattering over a rise in the road—an odd contrast to the beautiful vista: a fairy atmosphere for this work-a-day cavalcade.

"To the Land of Make Believe" (No. 8) is a darkly description of rustic children pressing into the entrance of a barn-like theatre. A yellow brilliance, emanating from within, gives diffused illumination to outside detail and invites imagining of the make-believe. There is attractive treatment in the bluish night shade and ghostly ambience of Nos. 1, 4, 10 and 39. The last, "The New Moon," has a certain dramatic effect in composition.

Some water-colours on the south wall will attract attention for the effective technique suited to the type of paper. Miss Davidson's sepia portrait of "AE" (No. 40) is one of the best extant of George Russell. The exhibition will continue until 16th inst.

KERRY MANŒUVRES

Successful Army manœuvres were held in Kerry yesterday. The scheme of operations presumed a landing on the west Kerry coast. The Local Security Force members countered the attack and stemmed the advance of the invading section, although a small section of the attackers succeeded in reaching Tralee. The Local Security Force were under the District Leaders, T. O'Connor, Tralee, and P. Kenneally, Listowel, with Chief Superintendent Harte in charge of the Gardai.
